Belgrade, March 14.—Discussions between Yugoslavia and Germany have broken down and the projected trip of Yugoslav statesmen to Berlin has been indefinitely postponed, well informed sources in Belgrade said today.

It is now considered likely that Yugoslavia will make no commitments towards the Axis in the immediate future. The very fact that the negotiations have dragged on and that the trip has not yet been undertaken tends to confirm the report that an impasse has been reached.

Ever since the occupation of Bulgaria, Nazi diplomats have turned their attention toward Yugoslavia and after two weeks of kid glove diplomacy they find themselves to all appearances just where they started. They had expected to see Yugoslavia's Premier Cvetkovic and Foreign Minister Cincar-Markovic in Germany nearly every day since the beginning of the month. They have been disappointed again.

Nazis Face Severe Set-back

In the last week Yugoslavia has firmly resisted signing any document involving military commitments towards the Reich. If Yugoslavia's firm attitude is maintained, German diplomacy will have suffered a severe set-back.

Although the government's attitude during the crisis has been far from clear, it has been known that the bulk of the army and several popular opposition leaders all favored resistance to Germany's demands for Yugoslav military, co-operation. It is appearent that this sentiment opposing capitulation has had its effect upon the decisions of Regent Prince Paul and his government.

The failure of the discussions to date to reach any settlement does not mean that Germany will abandon its attempt to swing Yugoslavia into line with the new order. It does not even mean that these attempts may not eventually succeed, although one high neutral diplomat believes tonight that Yugoslavia has decided to avoid bowing to Nazi domination at whatever cost.

Such a course might eventually bring this country into war on the British side. Army circles were reported tonight prepared for this eventuality.

Germans Step Up Pressure

Indications that the Nazi diplomatic and military machine may be just about to begin putting high pressure on Yugoslavia appeared in German-controlled newspapers here and in other Balkan countries today. Up to now there have been few troop concentrations on Yugoslavia's borders.

The German attitude has been

Big Raid Hits Northeastern British City

Newspaper Office Struck by Fire Bombs; Attacks Widespread

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), March 15.—A northeastern British city had its first heavy air attack of the war today when it was showered with incendiaries during wide German raids over England and Scotland.

A newspaper office was among the buildings in the center of the town struck by the fire bombs. Blazes which started were reported brought quickly under control.

(The unidentified town could have been Edinburgh, Scotland, or Newcastle, England, northeastern cities which have been attacked previously but not heavily.)

Clusters of fire bombs also were

Union Ends Strike At Walter Reed 'For Nation's Good'

Because "the good of the Nation comes first," building tradesmen on strike at Walter Reed Hospital decided yesterday to return to their jobs despite the award of a separate contract on the reservation to an open-shop firm.

Skinker & Garrett, a Washington firm, is constructing barracks at the medical center. The walkout of their workers began March 6, in protest against a nearby job's being handled by the Merando Construction Co. which exercises the open-shop policy.

Approximately 250 union workmen were affected by the strike. They will be back on the job Monday morning.

Hamburg Is Left Studded by Fires; Britain Trains Corps To Invade Continent

Berlin (Saturday), March 15 (AP).—Small units of the R. A. F. attacked various points in western Germany last night, dropping explosives and incendiaries.

D. N. B. said night fighter planes have been using strong searchlights against German bombers. Pilots said they had great difficulty in avoiding this latest of British weapons.

By the Associated Press

London, March 14.—The R. A. F.'s powerfully stepped-up bombing offensive spread a wide pattern of violence in Germany and Holland last night and early today, and Britain disclosed that invasion troops of its own are being equipped against the day when the empire may challenge the Nazis on the European continent.

The hardiest and ablest soldiers of the British and Allied armies are being assembled and especially trained for armored barges, each fitted out to carry 50 fighting men and protected by a shield of steel slitted with 18 portholes for guns, an observer said.

The details of the training and equipment of these English Channel shock troops cannot be published. Nevertheless it is permissible to report that they have extraordinary fire power and that in a recent test members of these units made a forced march of 20 miles and were able to charge a hill at the end of the maneuver.

All are trained to get along for from 24 to 48 hours without sleep and to live for days on minimum rations.

Air Control First

When and whether this amphibian force goes into action will depend upon the job now being done by British pilots. For, it was stated, an effort to invest the continent must await the seizure by the British of technical and numerical superiority in the air—such a superiority, for example, as to permit the daylight bombing of Berlin without punishing losses.

In this aerial war the air ministry reported today that some of the most vital points in the Nazi war machine — Hamburg, the greatest German port, the shipbuilding center of Bremen, the German naval base at Emden—were hit in overnight attacks, along with vital objectives in the occupied Netherlands.

The assault on Hamburg was described officially as the heaviest in all the long series delivered on that city. Explosions and great fires were declared to have left the shipbuilding yards, the docks and warehouses in red chaos; to have added rubble to that left in a similar raid the night before.

Bremen and Emden were struck with less fury, the ministry stated.

In Holland, the ministry's bulletin said, two Nazi airdromes were bombed and in Rotterdam "huge fires" were left in a series of oil storage plants.

Off the Norwegian coast, a German supply ship was said to have been hit squarely on the stern and other Nazi vessels in that area were machine-gunned.

Off the Frisian Islands, along the

Killer's Trademark

Initial Scrawled in Blood May Solve Murder of Beauty

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, March 14.—The hammer-and-knife killer of Leila Welsh left behind "his trademarks, his flags of victory," Police Chief Lear B. Reed disclosed today as he indicated for the first time the existence of a definite suspect.

A 4-inch initial firmly sketched in the pretty heiress' own blood and a carefully arranged window curtain were termed by the former FBI agent as "two acts proving the killer's vanity and egotism."

Of the initial, five-eighths of an inch wide and drawn on the calf of the girl's left leg as if with the tip of a bloody glove, Reed commented:

"It might have been the initial of the slayer or it might have been an attempt to throw suspicion on somebody and mislead police. I cannot say yet whether it was the initial of the man under suspicion."

"We have known and heard in criminal annals how other slayer-egoists left their marks. This killer was that sort."

The chief would not say what the letter was, but his "man under suspicion" remark was the closest he has come to bearing out previous assertions that the five-day-old mystery would be solved.

The body of Miss Welsh, 24-year-old one-time beauty contest finalist and a former school teacher, was found in her bed last Sunday morning. Her skull had been smashed with a hammer, her throat slashed with a kitchen knife and a section of flesh cut from one hip.

Police were reported later to have found a secondhand dealer who positively identified the death hammer as one he had sold three days before the crime to a man between 40 and 50 years old, with graying hair and stockily built.

U. S. to Build Office 'City' In Maryland

450 Acres Chosen In Prince Georges; First Building to Be Like One in Arlington

Land for a suburban Government-office "city" which may eventually rival in size Washington's Federal Triangle is being obtained in Prince Georges County, Md., between Suitland and the District line, it was learned yesterday.

The 450-acre site, on Suitland Road, near Silver Hill Road, is about the size of 11 city blocks and is known as the Cary tract.

First structure there will be a General Office Building, to open in August, with room for 3,500 to 4,000 employes of whatever Government agency needs the space.

Like One in Arlington

Beyond the first building, for which Congress appropriated $3,200,000 last October, Government officials said the site would give room for eight buildings, to take care of 60,000 employes, during the next ten years if large-scale office expansion becomes necessary.

The first General Office Building will be a twin of the one now under construction at Columbia Pike and Arlington Ridgeroad in Arlington County, Va.

Equal sums were appropriated for the two structures. The building price of the Prince Georges County office, however, will be tapped to obtain the extra land. Officials said that of the 450 acres, about 300 have already been purchased, and condemnation proceedings are to be started for the remaining 150 acres.

Representative Sasscer (Democrat), of Maryland, whose District includes Prince Georges County, said that the office development was one of the most important things that have happened to Prince Georges County in recent years.

Sasscer Is Pleased

Sasscer, it was learned, has been working closely with Federal Building officials for several months in their search for sites to relieve the pressure of defense expansion within the District.

Sasscer said he had long urged to Federal officials that land was available in the county for Government office buildings.

He pointed out that the Prince Georges site was close to downtown Washington, and called it the most convenient section where a large tract of land could be obtained at a reasonable cost.

Building officials declined to reveal the amount to be paid for the land already purchased, pending outcome of the condemnation proceedings.

Blossom Festival Tentatively Set For April 5 and 6

A two-day Cherry Blossom Festival to coincide with Army Day weekend, April 5 and 6, was tentatively set yesterday by Chairman Edgar Morris of the festival committee.

Depending on the weather and the blooms, of course, it may be necessary to hold the festival the following weekend, coinciding with the Easter festivities, April 12 and 13.

Meeting in the District Building yesterday the steering committee voted to have the District Commissioners act as honorary chairmen, Morris as general chairman, Francis G. Addison, jr., as treasurer and William H. Press as secretary.

If the festival is held on April 5 and 6, the Army Day parade will be routed down to the Tidal Basin. Following the parade a performance will be offered by the Columbia Light Opera Co., similar to last year's.

John Roosevelt Made an Ensign

John Roosevelt, the President's youngest son, has been given an ensign's commission in the Navy Supply Corps, the Navy Disclosed yesterday.

Last of the President's four sons to be made an officer in the armed services, he will be ordered to active duty soon. Officials said his first assignment probably would be to the Naval Finance and Supply School at Philadelphia.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., the President's third son, received orders to duty aboard the Destroyer Mayrant, effective April 3. James, the eldest, is a captain in the Marine Corps Reserve, serving a year's active duty, and Elliott is a captain in the Army Air Corps Specialist Reserve.

Funds Are Provided For 729 New Ships And Current Needs After Brief Deate

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The House passed a record-breaking $3,446,585,144 naval appropriation bill yesterday after hearing a warning that unless the Nation builds an all-powerful defense, "we will certainly be attacked, sooner or later, by the hungry Axis hordes of Europe and Asia."

Chairman Scrugham of the House Naval Appropriations Subcommittee sounded the warning as the huge measure rode through the chamber without amendment and after but brief debate.

Urging support of the bill, which carries $1,515,000,000 for next year's work on the two-ocean Navy, Scrugham said that "mastery of the seas" will be the decisive factor in the "struggle between democracy and totalitarianism."

For 729 Ships

The bill provides for carrying on construction of 729 ships of all types as well as $350,372,000 to pay for 7,129 airplanes now on order. No ships or planes will be added by the measure.

An increase in Navy man power to 258,000 sailors and 50,566 marines is provided, besides funds for arming privately owned merchant ships.

Meanwhile, testimony before the Senate Appropriations Committee disclosed that the Navy plans to shorten the course at the Naval Academy to three years during the emergency.

Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, said that the class of 1942 will be commissioned next February, four months ahead of schedule, with the graduation of the class of 1943 and subsequent classes moved up a year.

Secretary of War Stimson announced that West Point cadets beginning next year will take two years of Spanish instead of one. Instruction in French will be cut from two years to one to make this possible.

One hundred members of each course will study German, not previously taught, instead of the second year of Spanish. Announcing this at his press conference, Stimson added with a smile:

Flat Feet May Save Greenberg in Draft —Also $50,000

Detroit, March 14 (AP).—The flat feet that have carried big Henry Greenberg to great baseball honors and to a 1941 playing contract reported to call for $50,000 produced a difficult question tonight for his draft board here.

$50,000 Feet

Two Detroit newspapers reported the draft board physician who recently examined the Detroit Tiger outfielder had recommended that Greenberg be given a class 1-B rating, making him available only for limited Army service, because of the flat feet.

Greenberg, in training at Lakeland, Fla., said if that is so "it is a great surprise to me"

New Thanksgiving No Christmas Aid

New York, March 14 (AP).—President Roosevelt's proclamation of an early Thanksgiving in 1939 and 1940 failed to help New York's retail Christmas business, Commerce Commissioner George A. Sloan said in substance today

Sloan said he based his conclusions on data furnished by 200 retail establishments and added that incomplete data from 22 other cities showed similar results.

In the city survey, he said, firms provided data for the years 1936 and 1938, in which Thanksgiving was observed nationally on the traditional last Thursday of November, and 1939 and 1940 for which President Roosevelt proclaimed the holiday a week early

10,000, Record Number, to Pay Income Tax Here on Last Day

Collector's Office Visited by 7,000 Yesterday; Many Volunteer Defense Contributions

This is the last day to pay the 1940 income tax, and a record-breaking parade of 10,000 taxpayers is expected to move through the doors of the Internal Revenue Bureau on Constitution Avenue.

The hours will be from 8:30 a. m. to midnight.

Approximately 7,000 men and women visited the collector's office yesterday. This was a local record for the next to the last day. It was accounted for by two things—the lowering of the exemption from $1,000 to $800 for single persons and from $2,500 to $2,000 for married persons, and the sharp increase in Washington's population.

A. P. Rasin, assistant chief field deputy in charge of the local Internal Revenue office, told The Washington Post that a number of persons had come in to contribute toward national defense—persons who were not required to pay any income tax.

Rasin said that the number of taxpayers visiting the collector's office in the last few days has been considerably larger than for a similar period last year. On the final day last year the number was 7,500.

"It ought to go to 10,000 tomorrow," he said.

A total of 130 workers are handling the rush, 89 of these actually helping taxpayers make out their returns.

Postmaster Vincent C. Burke announced that for the convenience of those who desire to purchase money orders for payment of income tax, all stations will remain open today until 6 p. m.

Money orders may be purchased until midnight at the Benjamin Franklin Station, Twelfth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, and at the main office, North Capitol Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

District Tax Returns Not Due for a Month

District income tax returns are filed separately from the Federal tax returns, and need not be turned in for another month. The returns and the first-half installment of the District tax are due April 15.

Britain Sends U.S. Terms for Feeding France

Conditions Under Which Blockade Might Ease Outlined for Roosevelt

By Robert P. Post
Copyright by New York Times

London, March 14.—The British are forwarding to Washington an outline of the conditions under which they might be willing to relax the blockade in favor of food for France.

The outline, which apparently is to be submitted mainly because President Roosevelt wants it, is still somewhat vague. The plan seems to visualize an almost unlimited supply of wheat and a limited supply of other food in North Africa, which means this food will find its way to unoccupied France eventually.

Two main conditions are attached to the proposal. One is that the French shall promise, in return, that all German infiltration into French Africa shall cease. At the moment, the British do not believe there are many more than about a hundred official Germans in Casa Blanca and other places, as part of armistice missions. But some of these are military technicians and the British are definitely afraid they represent the thin end of a wedge. They fear Fifth Column technique.

Insist on Supervision

The other condition is that the distribution of food must be supervised by British or neutral observers who will be required to make absolutely certain that whatever is sent to France or French Africa remains there and does not get either into Germany or into German-occupied territories. The British ap-

Emmitt Warring Is Granted Writ Of Habeas Corpus

Emmitt R. Warring, Washington numbers baron now in Lorton Reformatory for jury tampering in an income tax evasion case, was granted a writ of habeas corpus yesterday by Justice Goldsborough.

At 10 a. m. next Wednesday the court will hear the contention of Myron G. Ehrlich, Warring's counsel, that the two 13-month sentences imposed on Warring were "void and illegal and in contravention of his rights."

Ehrlich claims Justice Bolitha J. Laws' sentences for criminal contempt were void because they failed to include a minimum and a maximum term as required by the indeterminate sentence law.

Schenck's Good Deeds Included Paying Actress' Laundry Bill

By Inez Robb.
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, March 14.—The infinite variety of Joseph M. Schenck's good deeds in a naughty world continued to unfold today in his trial for alleged income tax evasions amounting to $412,000.

These deeds ranged from purchase of a 65-cent luncheon for Mrs. Doris Duke Cromwell, America's 22-carat golden girl, through payment of a laundry bill for Miss Sandra Rambeau, the most alluring femme fatale to cross the international horizon since Gaby Deslys, to a $100,000 cash loan to Sweet Willie Bioff, West Coast theater labor leader.

The Bioff loan, which moves through the Schenck trial like a leitmotif, was returned by the labor leader and placed—of all things—in the little tin box which the American public now knows to be standard equipment in all big business offices. But the Government contends the repaid loan was not listed by Schenck for income tax purposes.

"One day I was called into Mr. Schenck's office," his former secretary, Miss Ruth Nolander, testified. "I found Mr. Schenck counting money. Mr. Bioff was sitting at Mr. Schenck's right. When Mr. Schenck counted to $100,000, he stopped and placed the money in a large envelope.

"He handed the envelope to me and I sealed it. Later I [illegible] the envelope to Codd (John B. Codd, controller of Schenck's company, Twentieth Century-Fox). I warded him that it contained a large sum

President to Explain Aid Program in Talk To Be Rebroadcast In Six Languages

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt is expected to call on the Nation for "toil and sweat" when he explains his British aid program tonight in an address to the world by radio in the unprecedented setting of a dinner in his honor given by the White House Correspondents Association.

The address will be broadcast by all major networks at 9:30 and will be rebroadcast to the world in six languages.

Now that the lend-lease bill is law, White House advisers expect the President to ask the Nation to settle down to grim sacrifice and hard work for a British victory.

Some of the friends who often help draft the President's speeches have been at the White House helping to shape the talk.

Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, of New York, who helped edit the President's public papers, is a White House guest. Robert Sherwood, playwright, who wrote the war drama, "There Shall Be No Night," was also at the Executive Mansion. Anna Rosenberg, New York City director of the Social Security Board, spent several hours at the mansion Thursday. Harry L. Hopkins, the President's recent emissary to England, also is understood to be helping with the speech.

Encourages Yugoslavs

Even as he prepared for this major public pronouncement, the President issued a statement on lend-lease policy yesterday that held out hope for struggling Yugoslavia, victim of an invitation to join the Axis.

The Chief Executive at his press conference declared that any nations not now resisting aggression which might decide to do so would become eligible for help under the lease-lend bill.

A course of sacrifice will be outlined to the Nation tonight by the President, it is understood.

An example of what such sacrifice may mean was information from Administration officials that changes in the income tax laws which will be recommended include stepping up the normal tax rate to perhaps as much as 6 per cent and starting surtaxes at a lower income figure, possibly $3,000. The present defense supertax of 10 per cent may be drastically increased, perhaps doubled.

Officials also are talking about a "forced savings" plan that would require wage earners to put aside a few pennies each week toward income tax payments. The newly lowered exemptions have brought the experience, it was said, that persons of small incomes have great difficulty finding the funds to pay Uncle Sam at income tax time. The exemptions are now $2,000 for a married person and $800 for a single person, and may go lower.

Report on Ships Denied

Increases in excise taxes are expected, as well as decided stiffening of the rates on excess-profits.

The President was expected to supply details of his plans under the $7,000,000,000 aid program. Beyond the bare announcement that equipment had already been approved for release to Britain and Greece earlier this week, the President has made public no details.

He took advantage of his press conference yesterday to deny rumors that 99 warships and 400 cargo vessels would be turned over, but conceded this problem might come up in the future.

He specifically said in answer to

Over Our Shoulder

Blow, Bugles, Blow

If you're interested in a short course on how to run a war, you'll find a lot of helpful hints in tomorrow's Post.

Item: Bernard M. Baruch's article entitled "Priorities: The Synchronizing Force." Mr. Baruch was chairman of the War Industries Board in 1918 and 1919; knows what he's talking about. And what he's talking about is a matter of vital importance in making the defense gears mesh as the machine picks up speed.

Item: The book page, on which you'll find reviews of a book about the Air Force, three books on what the citizen should know about (a) the Army, (b) the Navy, (c) the Coast Guard, and a book on the economic consequences of wartime inflation.

Item: An article on "Bundles for Britain," a little idea of Socialite Natalie Latham which has enlisted the aid of 700,000 women. Not a bad trick, that—to get 700,000 women working together! Frank Dennis tells how it's done.

Item: The story of the American Legion's twenty-second birthday, and the work the Legion is doing to further the cause of national defense.

We Love a Mystery

"And there are a lot of mysteries in "Evil Chance," the Sunday Post complete novel for this week. Big mystery, of course, is who killed the housemaid. Mystery No. 2—why was she dressed in her mistress' most expensive clothes? Then there are the mysteries of the doctor's house, into which refugees went but never came out, the mystery of the poisoned wife, and enough other complications to satisfy all you amateur detectives. Romantic note: the setting is Paris.

Lovely Ladies

Helen Hayes needs no press agent with The Post. First Nelson Bell wrote about Helen, the actress. Now Richard Coe starts his new column, "People You Hear," by interviewing Helen, the radio star. And Gerald Gross finds added interest in the story of Helen, the Washingtonian.

Rita Hayworth (whose real name is Margarita Carmen Cansino) is equally well represented, with a full-length article by Lucie Neville, a write-up by Louella Parsons, and a half-page of pictures in the roto section! (This has nothing to do with either Helen or Rita, but you'll enjoy Nelson Bell's column this week—it's a letter from former Post drama editor, Frank Morse, telling Bell a thing or two.)

Was Your Tax Fair?

Did you groan when you paid your income tax? Maybe you think it would have been less if the Average Man, with an income around $1,400, had decided what you should pay, instead of a lot of $10,000 Congressmen and well-paid Treasury experts! Maybe you're wrong! The Gallup Poll interviewers asked taxpayers how much they thought was being paid, and how much should be paid, by taxpayers making $3,000, $5,000, $10,000, and $100,000. You'll be surprised at the public's ideas.

McCarthy Says Canada Is 'All Out' for Britain

Leighton Goldie McCarthy, Canada's new Minister to the United States, assured the Nation yesterday that his country is making an "all-out" aid effort for Great Britain.

An intimate friend of President Roosevelt and a trustee of the Warm Springs Foundation, McCarthy arrived here Wednesday and was received by the President Thursday evening at tea in a manner almost as informal as the reception for Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, earlier this year.

The ruddy-cheeked, 71-year-old diplomat-businessman radiated confidence in a British victory.

"The way to insult an Englishman," said the Canadian Minister, is to suggest that he isn't going to win the war." He stated his emphatic belief that Britain would win.

Declines to Give Details

McCarthy declined to give reporters details of Canada's war effort. Those who attended his first press conference here attempted to draw him out on how many Canadians were under arms and how much Canada was spending for defense. He declined to answer the questions, saying he had not yet had an opportunity to familiarize himself sufficiently with the situation.

A native of Barrie, Ontario, McCarthy's appointment as Minister brought him back to government service after a 33-year interlude. He served in the Canadian House of Commons from 1898 to 1908, but entered business thereafter. He rose to become one of Canada's outstanding businessmen. His name is most often associated with the Canada Life Insurance Corporation, but he is also chief executive in Canada for the Union Carbide interests and the Aluminum Co. of America's empire. In addition, he is director of 11 other major companies, embracing a broad field of activity.

An Avid Hockey Fan

Athletic-looking and an avid hockey fan, McCarthy wore a maple leaf insignia in his lapel yesterday as he received the press in the wood-paneled study of the Massachusetts Avenue Legation.

With him was his son, John, through whose illness McCarthy first met President Roosevelt.

Young McCarthy, when a small boy, was a victim of poliomyeletis. He was treated at Warm Springs Foundation. Through that connection McCarthy met Mr. Roosevelt, then on his way to becoming Governor of New York State. They have been fast friends ever since. The new Canadian Minister visits the Georgia institution every year.

He promised a fuller statement on Canada's war effort at a later date.

The dinner where the President speaks will find him seated at tables with a large number of notables, including Wendell L. Willkie, Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador; Secretary of State Hull, other Cabinet members and members of Congress.

Speeches at the correspondents' dinners have been taboo in past years and the President broached his speaking plans at his press conference yesterday by telling reporters he was making a rather unusual request for permission to speak at their dinner.

It is a topsy-turvy world indeed, he said, with a grin, when the President asks newspapermen for permission to make a speech. He was promptly extended an invitation to speak by Thomas F. Reynolds, outgoing president of the association.

When a reporter wanted to know if the speech would be a "fireside chat" the President replied in jest that it would be a fireworks chat.

The new morale branch will rank equally with other arms and services. It will handle welfare and recreational facilities at camps and cooperate with advisory morale agencies.

New Navy Dive Bomber Can Fly Rings Around Europe's Best With Twice Load of Explosives

NEW DIVE BOMBER—The Curtiss XSB2C-1, shown in flight and on the ground, has been designed to carry a bomb load twice as large as that borne by similar planes abroad

By Devon Francis
Associated Press Aviation Editor

New York, March 14.—Construction of a new type of dive bomber with a probable top speed of at least 350 miles an hour and designed to carry a bomb load twice as large as that borne by similar planes abroad was announced today.

It will be manufactured in quantity at the new Curtiss-Wright factory being built at Columbus, Ohio, Burdette S. Wright, the vice president, said the plane was designed to meet Navy requirements for:

Twice as many heavy bombs as any existing dive bomber.

The German Junkers "Stukas" have a top speed in level flight of about 250 miles an hour. They dive at from 250 to 300 miles an hour.

The announcement would indicate a bomb load capacity of at least 2,200 pounds. Current "production" dive-bombers of the Navy carry 1,000 pounds of bombs, and the Stukas carry from 550 to 1,100 pounds.

The new plane, fitted with a 1,700-horsepower Wright Cyclone engine, is considerably larger and heavier than any known types in the service of England, Italy or Germany. It carries its bomb load inside the fuselage, reducing "drag" and boosting speed. Stukas use 850-horsepower engines.

British Send U. S. Note on Blockade

parently are adamant on that point. No matter what they let into France and the French colonies, there can be no relaxation of the blockade on any occupied country, the British say. Northern France, Holland, Belgium, Norway and Poland have no hope of getting any food through the British blockade even if the French do so.

There is a large school of thought here which regards the whole proposal with distrust. This group argues, with facts and figures, that in fact there is no distinction between occupied and unoccupied France. They point to the fact that during three comparatively recent weeks 78 ships arrived at Marseilles and that most of their cargoes were taken by German and Italian "armistice commissions." And even if assurances were given, any food for France might have the effect of releasing food which otherwise the Germans would have to give the French in order to keep them from rioting.

In other words, this school of thought believes that it is time to face the fact that Vichy is completely controlled by Germany—they point to the fact that Admiral Darlan's statement on the possibility of French convoy had been anticipated by 24 hours over the Nazi-conrtolled Paris radio.

More important, however, is the United States. Relaxation probably will not be made without United States help—indeed, it would not be made unless Washington asked it—and even then it probably will not be granted to Hoover's organization or any other relief body, but only if the United States Government takes a formal hand.

Roosevelt to Treat Issue With Caution

President Roosevelt made it clear yesterday that an attitude of utmost caution would be observed toward food-for-Europe proposals, lest the food fall into the wrong hands.

He indicated, also, at his press conference that he did not consider the food situation as serious in some countries as it had been pictured.

The President said he had one suggestion to make—that people should be fairly clear in their facts on the food situation in Europe before reaching conclusions.

There is not much question, Mr. Roosevelt added, that the actual lack of foods to keep body and soul together is greatest in Spain. That raises the question, he said, about the certainty that none of the food that might be sent over should go outside a particular place.

aid by approximately $2,000,000,000.

In other words, according to this report, the value of the materials which the British have asked the United States to supply was roughly $9,000,000,000—instead of the $7,000,000,000 of the proposed appropriation bill. The report could not be confirmed last night.

Knudsen, Smith Testify

Witnesses at yesterday's executive sessions of the House Appropriations subcommittee included Director William S. Knudsen of the OPM; Budget Director Harold D. Smith, and high-ranking representatives of both Army and Navy. Smith was requested to return today.

The Post was informed last night that he was asked to come back in order to give the subcommittee an up-to-the-minute picture of Great Britain's financial situation in this country.

It was pointed out that the British financial information submitted by Secretary Morgenthau to Congress during hearing on the "lend-lease" bill is already two months old.

Expect Approval by Noon

After Smith has finished his testimony, it is expected that the subcommittee will proceed directly to consideration of the bill. One member ventured to predict that this group will have given its approval to the appropriation "by noon."

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the subcommittee, said at the close of yesterday's hearings that the bill will be submitted to the full Appropriations Committee Tuesday, will be reported to the House and debated the same day, and will be voted upon Wednesday.

"We have gone over in minutiae the estimates that go to make up the $7,000,000,000," he said, stressing the point that "the subcommittee has been fully informed on each item."

The likelihood of a unanimously favorable report for the appropriation bill was indicated by one economy-minded member, who declared that the witnesses yesterday had, in his eyes, fully justified all of the items of expenditure.

The gigantic grant of funds for "all-out" aid to Britain may take a few days longer in its passage through the Senate than the House, but its ultimate approval is generally anticipated.

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, said yesterday that he doubted that it would be possible to spend $7,000,000,000 in the time allotted without injuring American defense. A member of the Appropriations Committee, Senator Nye said he wanted airplane manufacturers to testify at the Senate hearings (tentatively set for the week of March 24) as well as Cabinet officers and Army and Navy chiefs.

U. S. to Raise Debt to Record High Next Week

Treasury Now Spends $500,000,000 Monthly For Army, Navy

By Irving Perlmeter
Associated Press Staff Writer

Secretary Morgenthau yesterday announced plans for $1,000,000,000 of Treasury financing next week which will boost the Federal debt to a new record high of $47,000,000,000.

He said it was planned to borrow $500,000,000 of "new money" through the sale of securities, and to issue additional securities to refund $504,000,000 of 1⅜ per cent Treasury notes coming due for payment June 15.

Baby-bond sales and borrowing of $100,000,000 on short-term Treasury bills, officials said, probably would put the debt past $47,000,000,000 next Friday or Saturday.

The Treasury currently is spending more than $500,000,000 a month for the Army and Navy. Ordinarily it would borrow no money in March because income-tax collections are expected to be about $1,000,000,000 this month.

Details of the new securities were withheld.

Predicting one of the fastest spending programs in history, responsible officials forecast that the $7,000,000,000 lease-lend appropriation would be spent and the weapons delivered to Great Britain and other friendly nations within the next 16 months.

These persons indicated that this was the goal of those who drafted the program, and they believed it could be achieved. They said it would swell the Federal budget for the next fiscal year to more than $20,000,000,000, making it easily the biggest in United States history and beating by more than $2,000,000,000 the costliest year of the World War.

What the aid program meant in money, officials added, could be explained by the fact that the appropriation was equal to about 82 per cent of all the coin and currency in circulation in the United States.

But officials said it meant a tremendous job for the Treasury to raise the money. Under present plans, most of it will be borrowed. The anticipated deficit for the next fiscal year was $9,200,000,000 before the aid program was devised. Now, an even larger amount may have to be borrowed.

Because of this, on May 1 the Treasury will begin soliciting nearly everyone in America to invest his savings in Government securities. Those who haven't the cash to buy $1,000 bonds will be offered smaller securities, as low as 10 cents.

The amount of borrowing will depend automatically on tax receipts. Revenues have been estimated for the next fiscal year at $8,300,000,000, but President Roosevelt has urged even more taxes.

Thus, more than one dollar out of every ten in the Nation's income will go to the Federal Government. On the other hand, more and more of the population will be working directly or indirectly for the Government and getting its living from it—in Government offices, training camps or munitions factories.

Plane Motors Of U. S. Called World's Best

An expert yesterday told the National Aeronautics meeting, which concluded a two-day session here, that American manufacturers are producing not only the most powerful and dependable airplane engines in the world, but are even improving them while increasing quantity production.

Henry C. Hill, of the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, declared that engine manufacturers are now gearing production to from 2,000 to 3,000 engines per month "without sacrificing any detail of precision or testing."

"It is because of the development of such engines now being sent to England that British fighting planes have been able to make 1,000-mile round trips in all kinds of weather," Hill said.

C. C. Carlton, managing director of the Automotive Committee for Air Defense, said that already five auto companies are systematizing their facilities to the production of airplane engines. In addition, he added, the automotive industry is going to supply parts and assemblies for thousands of bombers.

The conference, sponsored by the Society of Automotive Engineers, was held at the Washington Hotel.

Two Minor Strikes Affect Defense Plants

At Los Angeles, C. I. O. die casters, demanding higher wages, walked out of the Harvill Aircraft Die Casting Corporation, which had been filling $750,000 worth of defense orders, and at Kansas City, Mo., C. I. O. workers struck at the American Steel Works, demanding higher wages and revised work classifications.

At New York, representatives of Appalachian region soft coal operators met with United Mine Workers (C. I. O.) officials to discuss a new contract for 450,000 miners of the region. The operators rejected a proposal by John L. Lewis, president of the U. M. W., to continue work after April 1, under the present contract, if a new contract is not signed by then.

An agreement by the management of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., and the C. I. O. United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers on a new contract calling for wage increases removed the threat of strikes in the company's seven plants in New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Shipyard Truce

A threatened tie-up of construction on 19 ships at the Pascagoula, Miss., yards of the Ingalls Shipbuilding Co. was apparently ended when the Associated Press reported that Bryce P. Holcomb, Federal labor conciliator, had announced that riggers and erectors had agreed to return to work Monday morning under a temporary arrangement.

At Milwaukee, Dr. John R. Steelman, chief of the United States Conciliation Service, was quoted by the Associated Press as saying that he had completed an inquiry into the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. strike, which has held up production of $45,000,000 in defense orders since January 22, and planned to return to Washington at once to give his report to Secretary of Labor Perkins, who ordered the inquiry.

Fort Meade Classifies Men Despite Illness

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Correspondent

Fort George G. Meade, Md., March 14.—Four companies of Virginia Infantry, in quarantine for measles, will be classified by skills beginning today despite the restrictions placed on them by medical regulations.

The classification detail itself is in quarantine for measles and during its own period of segregation will complete its work except for the 176th Field Artillery. The scheme of classifying quarantined companies by the quarantined classification detail was suggested by Col. John A. Cutchins, of Richmond, division chief of staff.

Headquarters of the Fifty-fourth Field Artillery Brigade announced today that Capt. R. P. Graves, of Richmond, has been transferred from the 111th Field Artillery to command brigade headquarters battery. Capt. Francis E. Lutz, of Richmond, division press relations officer, formerly commanded the battery. Lieut. R. A. McCoy, jr., has been transferred from the 111th to Brigade Headquarters and Lieut. George H. Peyton from headquarters to the 111th. Four Infantry officers have been recommended to attend the battalion commanders and staff officers course at Fort Benning, Ga., for three months, beginning April 1. They are Maj. Herbert W. Harris, of Richmond, 176th Infantry; Capt. David W. Paulette, of Farmville, 116th Infantry; Lieut. Col. William T. Terry, of Baltimore, 175th Infantry, and Capt. William R. McKnight, of Cambridge, Md., 115th Infantry.

The Fifty-eighth Brigade announced nine officers of the 115th Infantry had been sent to Fort Benning to attend the rifle and heavy weapons course ending June 16. They include Capt. Hugh T. McClay, of Hyattsville; Capt. Randolph Millholland, of Cumberland, and Lieut. George B. Fowler, of Annapolis.

It was announced that 13 men from the Twenty-ninth Division would be sent to the bakers' and cooks' school for training prior to being assigned to the enlarged post bakery April 26. The bakery will prepare bread for all units at Fort Meade.

Maj. Charles H. Royce, infantry, provost marshal of Fort Meade, has been ordered to the command and general staff fischool at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. He will serve as an instructor.

A.F.L. Favors, C.I.O. Opposes Mediation Plan

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The two houses of organized labor revealed themselves yesterday as poles apart on the subject of a top mediation board for disputes in defense industries. An indorsement of the plan, carried to President Roosevelt, by William Green, president of the A. F. L., was followed by the publication of a sharply critical memorandum by Philip Murray, C. I. O. head.

Murray's memorandum, recently submitted to the President, coupled proposals for the board with those for "cooling-off" periods and termed them both "wholly unrealistic" and detrimental to labor.

Green, however, told reporters after a White House conference that he notified Mr. Roosevelt of the unanimous approval of the proposed 11-man board by the A. F. of L. executive council, which recommended its creation. Green confirmed reports that the board will consist of three public representatives and four each of labor and industry, the chairman to be one of the public members.

Green said the executive council had emphasized two features in indorsing the board: that the body be clothed with mediation powers and that whatever arbitration authority it had be voluntary, rather than compulsory. He added that he understood these principles were to be adopted when the board was created.

At his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt indicated he would have news of the project next week.

Murray's denunciation of the board proposal was included in a lengthy memorandum urging the creation of industry councils of a type which the C. I. O. has repeatedly advocated for key defense industries. These councils, comprised of equal labor and management representatives, each with a Government official as chairman, would determine wage and employment standards and would function to settle all disputes which might arise in the industry they covered.

"Labor relations have now advanced to the stature of industry-wide problems to be discussed in the light of industry as a whole," Murray wrote.

"The current suggestions for the establishment of an independent labor board for alleged cooling-off restraints to be imposed upon labor are wholly unrealistic, will not further the problem of national defense and will operate to the complete detriment of labor."

Murray characterized the present Government defense set-up as "unwieldly, inefficient and unfunctional" and said that its continuance would create "a chaotic situation most harmful to defense production and to the production of goods for civilian needs."

Murray is to meet with Mr. Roosevelt, however, probably over the weekend, to discuss the board at greater length, it was learned. C. I. O. headquarters declined to state whether at that time Murray would nominate the two members to which his organization is entitled

Jones Favors Home Buying Plan In Defense Setup

By the Associated Press

Government housing authorities testified yesterday that thousands of defense workers might be able to buy their own homes through creation of a special $100,000,000 fund to insure mortgages on permanent homes, built under the defense program.

Jesse Jones, appearing as Federal loan administrator, urged the Senate Banking Committee to approve legislation, already passed by the House, to establish the special defense housing fund under the Federal Housing Administration.

"I think it's thoroughly sound," Jones said. "I can see nothing wrong with it."

Abner Ferguson, FHA administrator, told Senators that thousands of family heads who would make good wages under the defense program would be able to buy the proposed homes even though they lacked the necessary 10 per cent for down payment.

10,000,000 Czech Spies Baffle Gestapo, Says Col. Hurban

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Czecho-Slovakia is a nation of "10,000,000 Fifth Columnists" working night and day to undermine Hitler's "New Order," Col. Vladimir Hurban, Czech Minister to the United States, declared last night.

Col. Hurban, speaking on the eve of the second anniversary of the Nazi occupation of his country, told reporters that the Czechs and Slovaks "have been subjected to the most inhuman treatment ever recorded in the history of civilized nations."

The Gestapo has killed thousands of his countrymen and imprisoned at least 100,000, he said, while half a million Czechs have been forced to work in Nazi labor camps.

Supplementing the minister's statement, the legation issued a detailed summary of anti-Nazi activities in Czecho-Slovakia, directed by a secret organization known as the Mafia, set up in Prague immediately after Hitler's arrival on March 15, 1939.

Legation officials told The Post they believe Czech sympathizers have been able to work their way into the ranks of the Gestapo itself.

Get Orders From London

At least 50,000 members of Hitler's dreaded secret police are stationed in Czecho-Slovakia, they said. Thousands of Gestapo agents have recently been dispatched to Italy and the Balkans, one attache explained, "and the organization is expanding so rapidly that the Nazis can't be sure of all the agents."

The Czech "fifth columnists" maintain "excellent communications" with the leaders of their government in London, the legation reported. Czecho-Slovak news broadcasts from London and Boston are received regularly in Bohemia and Moravia, Col. Hurban said, "and the German authorities are often amazed by the readiness of the Czecho-Slovak population to obey London orders."

Attaches said a recent broadcast from London described a White Russian in Prague as an undercover Nazi agent. The man was severely beaten by Czech patriots on the streets of Prague the day after the broadcast, they related.

Several illegal radio stations are operating in Czecho-Slovakia, they said, and an anti-Nazi newspaper called "V Boj" (To Arms), is appearing in Bohemia.

500,000 Nazis Police Nation

In addition to the secret police force of 50,000, the Nazis have stationed 150,000 regular police and 300,000 soldiers in Czecho-Slovakia, according to the legation. The soldiers are "first-line troops," it was stated, and their immobilization is one of Czecho-Slovakia's chief contributions to the anti-Nazi cause in the present phase of the war.

Workers in Czecho-Slovakia's huge arms and munition plants, besides sabotaging material for the Nazi war machine, smuggle out machine-gun parts and other equipment to be assembled "when the time is ripe for armed rebellion," the officials said.

They quoted from a letter recently received from Czecho-Slovakia:

"Our blood runs cold with terror; 116 workers in the Skoda plant in Pilsen have been executed; 3,000 tons of steel were spoiled by adding sulphur and zinc.

"There were street demonstrations yesterday and today, with 1,800 people arrested. Several Black Shirts were beaten and injured.

Martial law has been proclaimed and anyone found on the street after 7 p. m. will be shot.

"A bridge on the Northern Railway was blown up today; a guardhouse with 12 Nazis went up with it . . ."

Anti-Nazi literature is distributed on rolls of thin paper, even by school children, the attaches reported, and messages from leaders of the "fifth column" to the Czech people are often circulated by the chain-letter system, with each recipient of a letter obliged to copy and distribute the message to ten more Czechs.

They said 3,000 Czech workers recently defied the Nazi authorities by going on strike at the Avia airplane factory, "which is known to be producing silent glider planes for the invasion of England."

Tacit admission of the extent of Czech sabotage and the nation's spirit of resistance can be found in numerous announcements by the German authorities and articles in the Nazi-controlled press of Prague, they pointed out.

Even Sudetens Are Bitter Now

Gestapo headquarters in Prague recently reported to Berlin that "we have to deal here with a nation of 10,000,000 spies," they said.

Even the Sudeten Germans are bitterly opposed to the Nazi regime, it was stated. An attache reported that the walls of buildings in the Sudentenland have been smeared with the slogan, "Hitler nieder, Benes wieder" (Down with Hitler, back with Benes).

Col. Hurban declined to compare the strength of the anti-Nazi movement in Czecho-Slovakia with that in other conquered countries. He praised the spirit of the Dutch and Norwegian people, however, and inferentially indicated his opinion that the Czech resistance is more stubborn than any in the Reich with the observation:

"After all, we've had much more experience at this sort of thing than other occupied countries. We had our independence only 20 years and from 1914 to 1918 we had four years of practice at sabotage in war time."

The envoy reaffirmed his faith in the eventual restoration of an independent Czecho-Slovakia. He spoke with pride of the Czech army and air force now serving in Britain and the Middle East and reported that Czech pilots are still arriving in England.

He recalled that the Czech forces on the Western Front "naturally suffered some decline in morale when they saw the collapse of France." The morale of those evacuatd to England was completely restored within a month, he said.

"That shows you the tremendous power of the spirit of the British people—it was their spirit that had so deep an influence on our people who had undergone such tragic experiences."

Col. Hurban said collaboration between Czecho-Slovakia and Poland would be one of the cornerstones of postwar Europe. Asked if Poland "hadn't grabbed a slice of Czecho-Slovakia" at the time of Munich, the minister replied:

"Yes, they did. It was nothing the Polish people wanted to do, and they are sorry it was done. We don't speak of it any more."

WPA Dismissals In Antisubversion Drive Upheld

New York, March 14 (AP).—The appellate division upheld today the WPA's dismissal of persons refusing to sign affidavits they were not Communists, Nazis or members of any organization advocating overthrow of the Government.

The decision affirmed a ruling by State Supreme Court Justice Ernest E. L. Hammer in the case of Charlotte I. Long against Lieut. Col. Brehon B. Somervell, former city WPA administrator.

Miss Long, a stenographer, sought $826 salary and $5,000 damages as a result of her dismissal because she refused to sign the affidavit.

Powder Plant AtRadford, Va., Is Dedicated

By Ben Hardy
Post Staff Writer

Radford, Va., March 14.—The giant Radford Ordnance Works, spewed from fertile Virginia farmland in seven months of mighty effort by an army of workers, was hailed today by high-ranking Government officials as an answer to the urgent need to "keep our powder dry and have a lot of it."

The $44,000,000 plant, ready three months ahead of a schedule that calls for capacity production of 300,000 pounds of smokeless powder a day, was formally dedicated by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, Gov. Price and other speakers before a cheering throng of 10,000.

Maj. Gen. C. M. Wesson, Army chief of ordnance, who presided at the ceremony, termed the sprawling plant "a substantial contribution to our military power," and praised it for the "distinction" of being the first of the Army's new munitions plants to begin production.

Stimson Message Read

Gov. Price called it "tangible evidence of the industrial skill, resourcefulness and vitality of American industry," and "a material symbol of American democracy."

Gen. Wesson read a message from Secretary of War Stimson, who extended his heartiest congratulations to everyone connected with swift construction of the project, which he termed a "milestone on the defense program" which would have a "vital bearing" on equipment of the Army and the safety of the Nation.

Undersecretary Patterson, Gen. Wesson, a score of Senators and Representatives, and other Government officials came by special train from Washington for the dedication, and were joined en route by State officials and representatives of nearby communities.

Much construction remains to be completed, but assembly line "A" will begin within ten days to produce powder for small arms, which the Army needs badly. Two more production lines, to swing into action by summer, will make powder for artillery.

The Gallup Poll

Roosevelt Popularity at New High Of 72% as Lend-Lease Bill Passes

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion
Copyright 1941

Princeton, N. J., March 14.—In the past six weeks, while Congress has been debating H. R. 1776, President Roosevelt's personal popularity has risen to the highest figure ever recorded in the 7-year Presidential index of the American Institute of Public Opinion.

Dr. GALLUP

Nation-wide Institute studies completed as Mr. Roosevelt put his signature to the Lease-Lend Bill this week showed 72 per cent of the voting public supporting him, as compared with 55 per cent in the Roosevelt-Willkie election result four months ago.

The figure also tops the 71 per cent found supporting President Roosevelt at the time of his third inauguration in January.

The highest previous popularity mark recorded was 69 per cent in February, 1934, at the end of Mr. Roosevelt's first year in the White House.

In the current survey voters in each of the 48 States were asked:

"In general, do you approve or disapprove of Roosevelt as President?"

A similar question has been put to cross-sections of the voting population in nearly 30 successive studies in seven years.

The replies of those with opinions were:

Approve	72%
Disapprove	28

Answers Axis Critics

The results of the survey are not only a spectacular vote of confidence in the Chief Executive at a time when his Lease-Lend Bill has been under sharp controversial fire, but also a categorical answer to Axis critics who have charged that the people of the United States "no longer support their President."

Attacking Senate passage of the Lease-Lend Bill, Virginio Gayda and other Axis spokesmen charged this week that the Lease-Lend bill had been passed contrary to the wishes of the American people, and that "the sacred principles of democracy" had been violated.

Nazi papers in South America added, Monday, that Americans would never have re-elected Roosevelt had they known his plans for aiding Britain.

Samplings of U. S. public opinion throughout the Lease-Lend Bill controversy have, of course, shown voters from 2 to 1 to nearly 3 to 1 in favor of its passage since its first introduction, as the following summary of four successive Institute surveys indicate:

DO YOU THINK CONGRESS SHOULD PASS THE PRESIDENT'S.. LEASE-LEND.. BILL?

	Feb. 9	Feb. 14	Feb. 28	Mar. 8
Yes	54%	58%	55%	56%
No	22	21	20	27
Qualif'd Answers	15	14	11	8
Undecided	9	7	14	9

Further evidence of the public's feelings, about aid to Britain came earlier this month, when an Institute survey found 61 per cent saying they thought Wendell L. Willkie, defeated Republican candidate who has also supported the Lease-Lend Bill, would "have made a good President" if he had been elected.

In today's study 40 per cent of those who voted for Willkie last November said they now "approved in general" of the President, as did 96 per cent of those who supported Mr. Roosevelt on election day.

Capital to See Relic of Battle Of Britain

A small glass case full of ashes from the great fires started in London by Nazi bombers December 29, bomb splinters and fragments from a fallen Hurricane fighter will be exhibited here today in the "Iron Duke," mobile tea kitchen, first relic sent on American tour from the Battle of Britain.

The bomb-scarred kitchen, which was under fire 33 times, will stop here first at 9 a. m. in the East Plaza of the Capitol for inspection by Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and other members of Congress.

Having survived six months of intensive service, the "Iron Duke" will house grim reminders of the fighting it stood up through while dispensing tea for civilian morale. One exhibit will be a piece of bomb that fell on Buckingham Palace. The King, reflectively, turned it over with his foot while talking after the raid.

To Visit Arlington

After going to Arlington, Va., the "Iron Duke" will be at the British War Relief Society's headquarters at 1018 Connecticut Avenue, between 4 and 6 p. m. The hostesses there will include Lady Campbell, wife of Sir Gerald Campbell, the British Minister. Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, local chairman of the British War Relief Society; Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, and Maurice Evans, the actor, will be among others inspecting the war relic there. Tomorrow it will be taken to the British Embassy.

Mrs. Bacon yesterday expressed hope that the relic, which during June and December of 1940 did much to stimulate British citizens to resistance, would attract the large crowds "it deserves."

Advance notices on the battle-marked visitor point out: "Through it all the Iron Duke bore a charmed existence, continuing to fulfill its duty to civilian and soldier alike. It served countless cups of tea, thousands of sandwiches, bowls of soup and plates of stew. It carried letters to homesick soldiers on duty in outposts far from home. It brought them cigarettes and magazines, shaving soap and razor blades, stamps and writing paper."

Will Go South Monday

From here, on Monday it goes South, by way of Middleburg, Va., and Warrenton, Va.

Saturday

8:30 a. m.—Arriving from Baltimore on the Bladensburg Road, it will be met at the District Line by a police escort.

9 a. m.—Stop on East Plaza of the Capitol to be inspected by members of the Senate and House Foreign Relations Committees and other members of Congress.

9:30 a. m.—Stop at Station WOL while Mrs. P. Hugh Tsherne Thomas, American-born officer of the British Women's Voluntary Service, makes a broadcast.

10 a. m.—Left by police escort at Memorial Bridge and will be met on Virginia side by Arlington escort.

10:15 to 12:30—Stop at Clarendon Circle on Wilson Boulevard, under the auspices of the Arlington Branch of the British War Relief Society.

12:45 p. m.—Return to Memorial Bridge and will be met on District side by police escort.

1 to 3:45 p. m.—Stop on parking lot at corner of Thirteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

4 to 6 p. m.—Stop before British War Relief shop at 1018 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, when Maurice Evans will visit it after the matinee performance at the National Theater.

6:30 to 9:30 p. m.—Stop on parking lot at Thirteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Sunday

9 to 11:30 a. m.—Stop at Chevy Chase Circle. At 10:05 a. m. Mrs. Thomas will broadcast over Station WINX.

12 to 1 p. m.—Visit to British Embassy to be inspected by Lord and Lady Halifax.

1:15 to 2:30 p. m.—Stop at intersection of Massachusetts and Wisconsin Avenues Northwest.

3 to 6 p. m.—Stop at 6326 Sixteenth Street Northwest, home of Mr. and Mrs. William Park, under the auspices of the Daughters of Scotia.

that relations between the two countries are excellent and that there is merely the question of settling a few matters in a friendly way. However, in the press comments mentioned, a new note of insistence and even threats were noticeable.

Predictions that a Balkan settlement will be achieved within a few days left readers wondering what was intended if a country like Yugoslavia should decline to cooperate.

It may become clearer within the next few days just what is intended. Germany has consistently asked for Yugoslavia's signature to the Tripartite Pact, to be followed by the passage of troops through here en route to Greece and Albania. Yugoslavia has expressed a willingness to sign a nonaggression pact, but because of German insistence, it appears that, for the time being, at least, nothing at all will be signed.

Big Raid Hits Northeast British City

dropped on London during the night and raids of varying intensity were reported from a northeast coastal town, the West Midlands, southwest Scotland and England and the Channel coast.

The attack was said to have grown worse on the southwest town as the moon rose. (The United Press reported that this attack was on Plymouth.)

Those incendiaries which fell in the streets of London were doused by fire watchers with the ease of a man stepping on a match. Other bombs put rooftops in flames, but they too were soon extinguished.

In a short while, London was quiet again.

13 Raiders Felled

By midnight, two German raiders had been reported shot down Friday night—one into the sea off the east coast, and another in the west country.

The British claimed for the defense of Thursday night a record score of 13 Nazi raiders—including one destroyed by an unexplained method of defense.

The British admitted, however, that the Luftwaffe at last had dealt damaging blows Thursday night to the shipbuilding center of Glasgow.

A hint that Britain has developed a "secret weapon" to discourage night bombings was seen in an air ministry communique which said "no less than 11 of the enemy fell to our fighters, one was shot down by antiaircraft fire and one was destroyed by other means."

Hints of New Weapon

Official quarters were tight-lipped about the significance of the words "other means." While some sources said it might simply mean the air ministry was not certain how the thirteenth raider was accounted for, authorities are known to have been working to perfect a device they describe as "really something"—a tremendous stride forward in licking the night raider.

Two hints of its nature have been offered publicly recently—reference in Parliament to barrage balloons which fly higher and carry "lethal" cables, and publication by the British Press Association yesterday of what it called an Italian report of a "new English weapon"—a projectile containing steel wires which unwound in the air to make, with other like projectiles, a "spider's web" to snare attacking planes.

(The British themselves had reported experiments with such a device.)

At any rate, the average Briton was pleased by the record of 11 raiders brought down by night fighters who were favored by moonlit skies.

The record of 34 night raiders brought down already this month was compared to the previous best of 32 each in September and October, when the Luftwaffe was busiest, and many Britons believed the work the air force has been putting in on manifold defense methods at last was bearing fruit.

In the subways and on the street corners people talked of the R. A. F.'s night exploits just as they talked about the day victories last fall.

Meanwhile, the Clydeside—the conglomeration of miles of shipbuilding and ship repair yards—dug out from under demolished homes and factories.

The government admitted Glasgow suffered a "heavy and prolonged" raid. Industrial buildings were damaged, many fires broke out and the number of casualties was "serious."

Houses Demolished

Only a crater marked the site of one tenement, several families were dug out from under another three-story apartment that collapsed, and there were other victims when a row of houses was demolished.

The raiders also made a repeat raid on Liverpool, badly mauled the night before, and set fire to a paint factory which blazed for hours at another northeast coast town (identified by the Germans as Hull).

Coincident with the attack on Glasgow—the first serious raid for that shipbuilding city since the start of the war—the government announced that a marine expert, Sir Arthur Salter, is being sent to the United States at once to work out details of aid to British shipping.

"In no sphere of our war effort is the help which the United States can give us under the lend-lease legislation more urgent than that of shipping," said the announcement from the prime minister's office.

Mission to Arrange for Food

Sir Arthur is parliamentary secretary to the minister of shipping.

Robert H. Brand, a director of Lloyds Bank, also is heading a mission to the United States to arrange for food shipments, it was announced.

"A really hard struggle at sea this year," was forecast by Ronald H. Cross, minister of shipping, in a speech to the Engineers Institute.

First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander told a press luncheon that a British victory "will not only be certain—it will be quick," if the Empire can hold on until American aid is received.

"You can not win this national struggle except on the basis of 100 per cent national cooperation," he said.

R. A. F. Offensive On Reich Renewed

North Sea coast of Holland and Germany, a 3,000-ton German supply ship was sunk by a torpedo launched by a British plane, the ministry added. She was hit in bright moonlight and went to the bottom while the British machine still circled overhead, it said.

In these raids, which extended over many hours, the loss of six British planes was acknowledged.

The last waves of British bombers visited Hamburg after 4 a. m. to "give the fires already set a new start," the air ministry news service reported.

Most of the bombs, however, were dropped from 10:30 p. m. Thursday to 1:30 a. m. Friday, and after that, official accounts said, "so much damage had been done that it was difficult to pick out details on the ground because of the glare of fires and the smoke over the city . . .

"Along both banks of the Elbe and all amongst the intricate network of docks, harbors and quays, warehouses and factories were blazing," the air ministry's reporter said.

A rear gunner watched one fire for 100 miles on his way home," it was stated. "He did not lose sight of it until he was above the Frisian Islands."

Some of the columns of gray smoke rose almost a mile, while explosions from burning buildings spread the flames.

The attacking force was described in the official accounts as "powerful." Its primary targets were docks and shipyards where are manufactured U-boats and ships of other kinds.

It was acknowledged, however, that the antiaircraft barrage which met the planes was almost as concentrated as the attack. Several planes were grazed by shells and came home with holes in fuselages or turrets.

"The searchlights were so many that it was scarcely possible to get away from them," the air ministry stated. "One pilot—held in a cone of searchlights—escaped by diving from 8,000 to 2,000 feet."

In connection with the training of offensive troops, the organization of a "reconnaissance corps" of the army is disclosed in the official gazette. An announcement covered commission of officers for this corps.

It will blast the way for infantry and make deep raids similar to the cavalry forays of classical tactics.

Observers point out that a few hundred trained soldiers of this sort, striking at the right spot at the right time, will be able to keep thousands of German troops on guard and thus virtually immobilized—long before the British start a continental invasion in earnest.

The British have for targets for these kind of tactics any lightly defended spots along 2,000 miles of irregular continental coastline, from the Arctic to the Bay of Biscay.

German raids, on the other hand, would have to be undertaken in the face of sea superiority and a comparatively short coastline which bristles with defenses.

British Press Addis Ababa From 3 Sides

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, March 14.—The British announced tonight they had 20,000 Italians and natives "on the run" northwest of Addis Ababa and were advancing on two other sides of the Ethiopian capital.

The Italian garrisons were said to be abandoning town after town in western Ethiopia.

In Gojjam Province Ethiopian "patriots," led by British regulars, were said in a communique to be at the gates of Debra Markos, 140 miles northwest of Addis Ababa, after a harrying pursuit from Burye.

To the west, the British announced the occupation of Asosa, near the Sudan border, and a continuing advance along the Mendi Road.

Ethiopians Aim at Neghelli

Mendi is about 50 miles east of Asosa and 240 miles west of Addis Ababa.

To the south, other Ethiopians were advancing on Neghelli after occupying Yavello, 100 miles inside the border from Kenya.

South and west Africans, after occupying Italian Somaliland to the east, were aiding in this advance from the direction of Dolo.

One column from Somaliland already had reached Daghabur, only 100 miles south of Jigjiga.

Italians Claim Victory

(Apparently they were driven out, for Italian communiques subsequently told of a defeat administered the British in the nearby region of Kurmuk on the Sudan border.)

More recently, the British said they had captured the escarpment in the Asosa region.

No change in troop positions in North Africa or Eritrea was reported, but the R. A. F. announced a heavy attack Wednesday night on Tripoli in which bombs were said to have splashed the length of the quay at that Libyan headquarters of the Italians. Ziten, nearby, also was bombed, while in Eritrea railway bridges, troops and guns were attacked at Cheren.

On land, the Italians said British attacks in the Cheren sector of Eritrea were repelled.

New Fascist Drive Crushed, Greeks Claim

By the Associated Press

Athens, March 14.—The Greeks said tonight that their stalwart defense against a furious Italian offensive had cut up five Fascist divisions in the last few days and that Benito Mussolini, who allegedly ordered the drive, must go back to Rome from Albania "covered with shame."

Today, as before, the Fascists got nowhere, the Greek command reported.

"The enemy," said the nightly communique, "again launched repeated and violent attacks on the same front after strong artillery preparation, supported by numerous bomber and fighter aircraft.

"He registered no success whatever despite considerable losses suffered. As a result of a counter-attack we took some prisoners."

R. A. F. Increases Aid

There was no indication that the fighting had made any significant change in the war front, and the Italians still hold long-assaulted Tepeleni, on the central front, and Valona, on the sea.

It was evident, nevertheless, that strong British aerial reinforcement was being given to the Greeks on the central front, for an R. A. F. communique said 14 Italian planes were downed in the Tepeleni-Klisura sector yesterday. The British reported they lost not a single plane.

Also in Albania, these reports said, was Marshal Pietro Badoglio, whom Il Duce sacked as chief of the Italian general staff last December. Unconfirmed reports say he is supposed to make a personal report to King Vittorio Emanuele.

(There have been reports in Rome that Badoglio might become a "special adviser" to the Italian general staff.)

Italy Claims Success

Rome, March 14 (AP).—Waves of Italian planes for six days and nights have bombed Greeks entrenched on 5,600-foot Mount Trebescines while land forces "slaughtered" attacking Greeks, Italian dispatches from the Albanian front near Tepeleni reported tonight.

The newspaper La Tribuna said the continuous bombing of Mount Trescines had "notably diminished" Greek fire.

The Italian report of heavy fighting on the Viosa front said Greeks attacking Italian-held heights were hurled back and one entire Greek division was "cut to pieces." Stefani, Italian news agency, said Greek dead littered the mountainsides and many prisoners were taken.

Two of five British torpedo-launching planes which attacked Italian shipping at Valona harboof on the Albanian coast were said to have been shot down and their crews captured.

Warsaw Slayings Bring Nazi Punishment Threat

Berlin, March 14 (AP).—The German governor of Warsaw has threatened extraordinary penalties if the mystery surrounding the slaying of a Polish film player and a judge are not cleared up in three days, a D. N. B., official German news agency, dispatch said today.

Igo Sym, film player and scenario writer, was slain in his Warsaw home March 7 and Germans said he had been "murdered by Polish Chauvinists."

Nazis Report Intensified Raids on Isle

By Joseph W. Grigg, Jr.
United Press Staff Writer

Berlin (Saturday), March 15.—"Successful" bombing attacks last night and early today on vital war industry plants in Scotland and the English Midlands were claimed this morning by informed Nazi sources.

The night's activities included the second consecutive heavy blow at Scotland, where the great industrial center of Glasgow was blasted Thursday night. The Germans yesterday threatened that when the Luftwaffe finishes with this important Atlantic port "not one stone will remain upon another."

Hundreds of Planes

By Percival Knauth.
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, March 14.—The scope and intensity of the German air attacks on England increased considerably last night, according to reports received here. Glasgow was claimed to have been very badly damaged in the course of a night-long raid and the Liverpool-Birkenhead area was again pounded by waves of German raiders while another large-scale attack was directed against Hull.

Last night was the first time the German air force concentrated "hundreds of planes" on Glasgow in a mass attack. The Germans were convinced that this attack was not only a serious material blow, extensively destroying the "industrial air raid cellar of England," but also that it was an important psychological blow. For it proves, they state, that no point in Britain, however far north it may be, is safe from massed raids by German bombing planes.

Glasgow is considerably farther from any German air base than any point in England hitherto attacked on a grand scale and the Germans believed that the British war leaders considered it a reasonably safe place. Because of this, it was asserted here, England's "war important" industries were to a large extent transferred to Glasgow—hence the German description of the city as the "industrial air raid cellar of England."

Likened to Coventry

Last night, however, it was claimed here, those industries were bombed on a larger scale than those of Coventry last fall and suffered no less damage.

The Royal Air Force last night subjected Hamburg to bombing which, the German quarters admit, was heavier than any raid heretofore. More than 50 people were reported to have been killed outright or to have been buried beneath the ruins of buildings blasted by bombs. Approximately 26 were killed in Berlin.

Soviet Stimulates Poultry Breeding

Moscow, March 14 (AP).—Soviet authorities decreed today a new system for obligatory supplying of eggs from farms to the state. The object is to stimulate poultry breeding.

The decree provides that farms must deliver at state prices 3 to 15 eggs yearly for each hectare (2.471 acres) of land, depending upon the fertility of the region. Such deliveries previously have been based upon the number of chickens owned instead of upon the size of the farm.

A similar rule already has been applied to meat in order to stimulate cattle breeding.

Judge Brands Scotty a Cheat; Defense Rests

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, March 14.—Federal Judge Benjamin Harrison said today that Walter Scott, famous desert prospector known as Death Valley Scotty, "stands here a confessed cheat."

His remark was made after the defense rested in the trial of a suit Julian M. Gerard, New York investment banker, brought against Scott for an accounting on an old grubstake claim agreement. Gerard seeks a 22½ per cent interest in everything Scotty has taken out of the rocks since 1907.

"There has been no evidence here indicating any property out there that Scott has an interest in. You don't expect me to believe his statement that he has buried gold certificates and gold ore," the judge said.

"He took Gerard for a cleaning. I don't believe he has any property upon which an equity could act."

Gerard's attorneys said that "if this is a fraud," they feel they should be entitled to a judgment.

Judge Harrison took the suit under submission for at least 25 days.

The desert prospector was not in court when the judge made his observations. Later, when advised of them, he commented:

"If he thinks I am a fake, I wonder if he would accept an invitation to go out in the rocks on a mule with me. Maybe I might show him something."

Highlighting the day's testimony was Scotty's story of how he took five or six thousand dollars in gambling winnings during the hectic goldrush days of Goldfield and invested them in mining stocks that eventually returned $100,000. That was in 1908.

Scotty said he hid $10,000 gold certificates in a desert canyon cache he described as a "spendthrift trust" bank—"A tough place where, when you want it, by the time you get it, it's so hard to get out, you're out of the notion to spend it."

Two years later, the prospector said, a cloudburst washed out the canyon, and he had been looking for the money ever since.

Gerard testified he is convinced Scotty still has a gold mine, but that he has been unable to obtain definite information about it.

Walker Said He'd Hit Her, Wife Avers in New Suit

Key West, Fla., March 14 (AP).—Trying again for a divorce, Mrs. James J. Walker testified today that her husband, "on some occasions" threatened to hit her.

She told Circuit Judge Arthur Gomez at a hearing in Chambers that the former Mayor of New York frequently lost control of his temper "and appeared almost mad."

"He would yell and scream and jump up and down and call me everything in the world," the former Betty Compton, English showgirl, alleged.

Judge Gomez turned down Mrs. Walker's first suit, holding she had not proved cruelty by testimony that Walker's refusal to forego public life imposed upon her social obligations that broke her health.

and to be careful."

"Did you ever see that envelope again?"

"Yes, in July, 1937," she replied. "Mr. Schenck was preparing to go to Europe. He took some money out of the envelope—I don't know how much—and handed me the envelope. I placed it in a safety box, turning the key in his presence."

"Did you ever see it again?"

"No, I didn't," she said.

Miss Nolander kept a sharp eye on Schneck's household and miscellaneous expenditures. When the company—and there was always company—consumed caviar and cigarettes in alarming amounts, she notified the boss.

Miss Rambeau's name was mentioned when Miss Nolander explained a steep laundry bill with the notation that it covered the laundry for both Miss Rambeau and Schenck's French tutor. Miss Rambeau, the Springfield (Mo.) girl who made good in Europe, was recently reported keeping company with Nazi Gen. Franz Ritter Von Epp, 72.

In other years, Miss Rambeau had been alarmingly pro-British, particularly with reference to the Duke of Kent. Indeed, the duke, on orders from parents and government, finally was forced to ask the the American girl for the return of letters, pictures and a certain family ring.

2 Cabmen Held In Slaying Of Woman

By the Associated Press

Gainesville, Fla., March 14.—A coroner's jury late today recommended that two St. Petersburg taxi drivers be held for action by the Pinellas County (St. Petersburg), grand jury in connection with the slaying of Mrs. Ruth Rawlins, 35-year-old wife of a retired Canadian metallurgist.

The jury returned a verdict that Mrs. Rawlins, whose body was found in a shallow grave beside a road near here early today, met death "with a cord or blunt instrument at the hands of Red Allen or Frank Hogan or both" in St. Petersburg Wednesday.

The taxi drivers were arrested near Brooksville early yesterday by State Patrolman R. L. Robinson.

Hogan was the only one of the pair who was brought to the inquest. He testified that he, Allen and Mrs. Rawlins drank beer at several places in St. Petersburg Wednesday and finally went to Allen's apartment. Allen and Mrs. Rawlings argued continually, he said, about Allen's accusation that she had been seeing other men.

Hogan testified he left the apartment several times and that Allen killed the woman while he (Hogan) was away.

Detective Chief John S. Siers said Hogan signed a four-page confession in which he claimed he watched while Allen killed the woman. Siers also said that Allen claimed that Hogan did the actual killing.

James Rawlins, the woman's husband, said he knew of no reason for the slaying.

British Friend Of Lindbergh Twits Flier by Mail

London, March 14 (AP).—Harold Nicolson, parliamentary secretary to the ministry of information, told a Leicester audience tonight:

"I had a great friend called Col. Lindbergh.

"Before the war he said to me: 'You are a fine people, but are getting soft.'

"After every raid now I have the great pleasure of sending him a postcard saying: 'Do you still think we are soft?'

"He doesn't answer these postcards, but I like sending them."

Nicolson was Charles A. Lindbergh's landlord when the American flier resided in the ancient timbered house, Long Barn, at Sevenoaks, Kent.

Conscientious Objector Tells How He Killed Rival in Love

By the United Press

Lancaster, Pa., March 14.—A truck driver who cheated on his girl friend told a hushed courtroom filled with Mennonites, Dunkards and Amish today how a beating he gave his rival for his sweetheart's love turned into murder when he "hit too hard."

William G. Redcay, 24-year-old Mennonite, a conscientious objector to war service, testified how he planned "to beat, but not to kill," Robert Hackman, 19, son of a Dunkard preacher.

Hackman had been keeping company with pretty Eva Martin, 19, a Mennonite, since last August, when she testified, Redcay broke their troth and started going out with other women. So she began going out with other men.

Hackman, Redclay said, "tormented" him by blowing his automobile horn as he passed the Redcay, home every time after he had taken Eva home from a date.

On January 12 when the preacher's son took the girl home from a dance, Redcay leaped into Hackman's car. An argument followed, Redcay said, when Hackman refused to "quit seeing Eva."

They started fighting. Redcay used a hammer and stones in "self defense," he said, and finally left Hackman lying alongside his car on a lonely mountain trail. Then he set fire to the car "but Robert still was breathing."

"If you only wanted to beat him up, how do you account for the fact you killed him," John Hamaker, prosecutor, asked.

"Guess it was a little too hard," Redcay replied in a trembling voice.

The State asked for a verdict of first degree murder with the death penalty.

Sitting in the jammed courtroom were Eva, garbed in traditional Mennonite costume, except for a fox scarf, and the Rev. Charles M. Hackman, father of the slain youth. The latter thumbed religious literature as Redcay testified, but Eva, her eyes flashing, stared at the witness.

As a Mennonite Redcay sought deferment from the draft because of "religious training and belief" which make him "opposed to war in which it might be necessary to take human life."

Fiasco At Walter Reed

The complete failure of the strike ordered by the Washington Building Trades Council on a project at Walter Reed Hospital should be a salutary precedent. Approximately 300 men walked out ten days ago. Yesterday they agreed to return to work on Monday, but in the meantime they have lost their wages and gained nothing except public ill-will. The cost of indefensible strikes, in terms of both prestige and wages, has thus been amply demonstrated.

In effect, this was a strike against the Government. A contractor employing union men was engaged in the construction of new barracks at Walter Reed when the War Department let another contract for the erection of a psychiatric ward at the hospital to a nonunion contractor. There is no relationship between the two projects, except that they will both serve the hospital. The fact is that the Building Trades Council called out its men in protest against the awarding of a contract which in no way affected the project on which those men were working. So the urgent work of providing quarters for enlisted specialists at the Army's medical center here was held up. But the smaller and less important nonunion project on which only about 25 men were employed went ahead without interruption.

Of course, the War Department refused to permit any union to dictate its policy in awarding contracts. Even the international unions which are represented in the council brought pressure upon the local leaders to retreat from their untenable position. There could be only one outcome to such an irresponsible flouting of the public interest, and that was to go back to work. President Roosevelt is expected soon to create a new mediation board for the settlement of labor disputes in deference to the obvious need for more effective means of adjusting legitimate differences between employers and employes. But in cases like that at Walter Reed no dispute should arise. When contractors adhering to closed-shop agreements undertake work for the Government, it is reasonable to let those agreements stand if they do not work serious hardships upon nonunion men seeking work. But certainly no union should be permitted indiscriminately to hold up defense projects as a means of forcing nonunion men to pay it tribute. A fiasco like the Walter Reed strike should not have been necessary to prove to labor that the country will not tolerate such tactics.

Buying For Uncle Sam

The Temporary National Economic Committee has just released a report on Federal procurement methods and problems sharply critical of the existing lack of coordination. The study is concerned with Government purchasing problems under normal peacetime conditions. It does not deal with the procurement problems of the defense program, since these problems are related to special machinery designed for the coordination of purchases for military use. Certainly the arguments in favor of increased centralization of procurement functions in case of the regular establishments are just as compelling under present emergency conditions as in normal times. Indeed, unified purchasing for nondefense purposes would facilitate cooperation with officials responsible for procuring military and other defense supplies.

The TNEC report states that, despite the gradual development of centralized purchasing during the last 30 years, almost two-thirds of the purchasing for the Federal Government is still on the decentralized basis of direct dealings between the operating agency and the supplier. Three agencies, the War and Navy Departments (which have separate procurement systems) and the WPA accounted for about three-fourths of all Government purchases during 1938. Of the other important purchasers, the Department of the Interior and the Department of Agriculture are characterized as "examples of largely decentralized departments with literally hundreds of field offices and agents throughout the United States, each engaged in making purchases for particular activities." Noncompetitive bidding on Government contracts as evidenced by identical bids, ill-timed buying for Government use, and inadvertent competition among buying agencies of the Government are fostered by this lack of centralized responsibility. And the cost of running the Government is greatly increased as a result.

The TNEC report is most timely in directing attention to a problem that has become increasingly urgent as the scale of Federal spending has expanded. Reforms are long overdue, and the defense emergency emphasizes the need for prompt corrective action.

Food For France

The American people must rely upon their Government for knowledge of conditions in continental Europe which are at present shrouded by censorship. This applies to the food situation. It is known, for instance, that the people in unoccupied France are on short rations, but for the exact state of their fare it is well to consult American officials who have the job of keeping our Government informed about the facts. When the President says the French plight has been exaggerated, therefore, it may be taken for granted that he knows whereof he speaks.

Nevertheless the Vichy request for a relaxation of the British blockade has hitherto been getting sympathetic consideration. Americans, official as well as unofficial, have been concerned about it. Even the British are said to have been taking the problem under review. After all, the British are not so stupid as gratuitously to drive the French people into Hitler's arms. But it is their job first to see whether the release of continental Europe from the clutches of Hitler can be squared with the relief of Hitler's victims. Nobody with any sense of proportion would have it otherwise. Such a reconciliation is hopeless in the areas under Hitler's occupation. But it is not hopeless in connection with either Finland (despite Mr. Hoover's persistent linking of Finland with the occupied countries) or unoccupied France. And for that reason The Post has hitherto seen merit in a relaxation of the British blockade in respect of both these countries.

However, any call upon the British to agree to relaxation of the blockade must be accompanied by recognition that the British must have guarantees. They would not be able to keep up the morale of their own people if they lifted the blockade in favor of governments which are playing Hitler's game, consciously or under duress. A reading of British newspapers proves this point. One of them prints a letter from a housewife saying "Our men feel it hard to have their homes bombed and stand for France getting helped after what Laval and others did." With Finland's guarantee the British are now satisfied, and of late the Finns have signalized in many ways their appreciation of Britain's understanding. The same exploration of practicable ways and means of making a similar arrangement with unoccupied France seems to have been in progress.

The British, of course, cannot expect Vichy to swerve by a hairsbreadth from its armistice terms with Nazi Germany. But there are steps that the French might take without damage to such engagements which would relieve the British of their suspicions of Vichy. The British, for instance, would like to see the French fleet moved away from Nazi reach from Toulon to North Africa. They would like to see a less complaisant attitude toward the infiltration of Nazi officers through Casablanca. Over and above all is a desire to see a non-French overseership instituted over the disposition of foodstuffs in a country which is at Hitler's mercy. Instead of aiding in the quest for a formula with which to aid unoccupied France, however, Admiral Darlan has suddenly turned the spotlight on his animosity toward the British. Even the correspondents on the spot remarked upon the "singular violence" of the Darlan outburst. And it is this astigmatic intervention which makes the American no less than the British problem in dealing with unoccupied France the more difficult.

Mobilizing Labor

At the instance of the OPM the chairman of the Social Security Board has issued a request to all unemployed workers to register at the State employment exchanges affiliated with the United States Employment Service. Employed persons with urgently needed skills which are not being used in their present jobs are also asked to register their qualifications for defense work at the nearest State employment office. Through this appeal the Government hopes to accomplish three purposes. First, it will obtain a comprehensive picture of the labor resources of the country. Secondly, it will acquire much needed information concerning the number of skilled employes available to meet the emergency demands of defense industries. Finally, it will get all applicants for work on the public registers and prevent employers from recruiting their labor forces outside the exchanges. This third purpose is particularly important. As shortages of labor increase, employers are greatly tempted to scout about for labor, lure workers from distant points by advertising, and hire them away from other industries. These abuses are eliminated when workers are hired through the public exchanges, a great deal of needless migration is avoided, and much more effective utilization of the country's labor force is assured.

In accordance with its general policy of avoiding compulsion whenever possible, the Administration is relying upon voluntary registration to assure effective mobilization of labor for defense. The aim is to interfere as little as possible with the freedom of workers to move about and the freedom of employers to bid for the services of labor. However, the call to men with unutilized skills to register for service is also a call to employers to be prepared to dispense with the services of men needed by defense industries. And it is also a call to the workers to be ready to take over defense jobs, even though the shift may mean harder and less congenial work. Registration begins today in preparation for the greatly increased demand for workers which is expected to develop within the next few months. Prompt and full cooperation on the part of the public will afford the best possible safeguard against establishment of official controls over the movement of labor and official regulation of employer-hiring policies.

Our Rotten Boroughs

Many of the State Legislatures which are meeting this year are shockingly undemocratic. While all have been elected by the people, some areas have far more legislators than they are entitled to, and others are inadequately represented. This travesty on popular government comes about through the failure of many States to reapportion their legislative seats on the basis of recent census returns.

Numerous tides of migration have swept over the country since the turn of the century. Yet Mississippi, disregarding its own constitution, has not reapportioned its Legislature since 1890. Five other States—Kentucky, Delaware, Illinois, Alabama and Tennessee—have not had a reapportionment since 1901 or earlier. The constitutions of nearly all the States require a redistribution of legislative seats every ten years or oftener. But the Council of State Governments finds that 17 States have neglected this basic responsibility of democratic government for 20 years or more. Several others have ignored their reapportionment timetables for shorter periods.

The reluctance of rural areas which have lost population to relinquish their control over legislation can be readily understood. But that does not excuse any failure to grant equal representation to newly developed areas. The very basis of popular government can be undermined if an entrenched minority uses its power to prevent a proper distribution of legislative seats. It should be remembered, too, that this taint of inequality reaches to Congress. While the seats in the House will be automatically reapportioned among the States on the basis of the 1940 census, the unwillingness of some States to shift Congressional district lines in accord with shifts in population has led to glaring disparities. Illinois has made only slight changes in its Congressional districts since 1901, and New York's redistricting dates back to 1911. Representative Donald L. O'Toole, of Brooklyn, for example, has 13 times as many constituents as Representative Samuel Dickstein, of Manhattan.

The record indicates that reapportionment and redistricting are among the foremost tasks confronting State Legislatures this year. They may well take note of the experience of Congress in dealing with the same problem on a national scale. Congress found that protracted fights over reapportionment can't be avoided unless the changes become automatic after each census. Where new district lines must be drawn, this principle is more difficult to apply, but at least the States could assign the task to impartial or bipartisan boards that would go into action after every census. A few of them have already set up such safeguards against the perpetuation of rotten boroughs.

Duce Vs. Ladybug

The Axis war on the insect world is still going on. Last fall it was the Germans who were worried about bugs. First they had the Nazi Youth patrolling the French border to arrest the first Colorado potato beetle attempting illegal immigration. Then they reported that the British were dropping the pests from airplanes. Now it is Italy that has taken up the crusade, with this decree in the official gazette: "The battle against ladybugs is henceforth obligatory throughout Italy." The reason given is that the critters are damaging the fruit groves, but one is moved to wonder whether Il Duce is not simply calling attention to the bugs at home to distract the populace from the bugs in the military machine. He has not, as the Germans did, used the incident to stir up hatred against a foreign power. If he has any such intention, he must be casting about him for somebody it will be safe to hate.

DARK WINDOW

No longer clear, the house across the way,
No longer visible, the rapid road;
Only the charcoal eve bent in its place,
Only the green bough, stooping with its load.

All else is night and night and yet more night,
Reaching to skies that dim eternity;
Only the storm leaps to the shuddering breast—

The window's dark, through which no man may see.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, letters should be held to 300 words. Letters are subject to condensation.

Plea For "Union Now"

The Bulgarian episode is another object lesson in Hitlerian technique. The principle of one step at a time has probably never been applied with such extensive results before. May we in this country never be in such a position that we must be seriously concerned with Hitler's "promises." Such "promises" have proved to be only forecasts of Nazi military activity. No one in his right senses can believe that Turkish independence will be respected any longer than ways and means can be found to placate Stalin and assure a successful penetration of Turkey.

It was in a situation paralleling that of a disunited Europe that Benjamin Franklin uttered an aphorism whose truth recent history has strikingly affirmed. To the representatives of a disunited America he said, "Gentlemen, we must hang together, or assuredly we shall all hang separately." It was too much to expect the Balkans to unite voluntarily to resist aggression, even in the face of "separate hanging." But is it too much to expect Anglo-American unity before the piecemeal conquest reaches us?

Clarence Streit's proposal for a British-American Union is a direct and stunning answer to the divide and rule philosophy of the Nazi regime. It is much more than this, however; it is a proposal for a practical, democratic political organization of two great complexes of tremendous economic and naval power for mutual advantage. Moreover the English-speaking union would be open to all nations whose constitutions guaranteed the basic human freedoms as defined in the union constitution. Within the ever-widening circle of union jurisdiction would develop a free civilization such as most of us dream of but hardly expect.

The contemplated union would be similar in form to the American Union with a representative legislature, an executive, and a judiciary. The rights of minorities would be protected, just as they are under the American Constitution by the Senate, and all power not expressly delegated to the central government would be reserved to the member states. Questions concerning procedure and problems arising under such a union may usually be answered by considering the similar procedure or problem in the American Union. Parallel situations may usually be found in American history.

The verdict of posterity has abundantly justified the faith and imagination of the founding fathers of the American Union. Let us hope that we in our turn will have the faith and imagination to build further on their foundation and that our posterity may glory in our achievement of the earlier promise.

FEDERALIST.

Washington, March 6.

Food For France

We should not forget, in our absorption with military defense, the role of humanitarian defense for which we are famous. The French government has communicated to our Government the necessity of obtaining and transporting wheat if the grave deficiency in the wheat supply of unoccupied France is to be made up. The granaries of France are in the occupied portion, now part of the Germany economy. To make matters worse, this year's harvest was 50 per cent below normal. Under these conditions, the British blockade is shutting out the only source of supplies that can save unoccupied France from famine. The British refused last week to allow 300 tons of oatmeal to be shipped in a Red Cross cargo of supplies to unoccupied France.

There seems no reason to suppose that wheat sent to unoccupied France would reach Germany. There is a distinction in fact between occupied and unoccupied France. The French government has suggested that supplies sent in be distributed under American supervision. Two prominent Americans, former Ambassador Bullitt and Admiral Leahy, both outspoken advocates of all-out aid to Britain, have in the past few days sounded the call for American aid to starving French civilians. Ambassador Bullitt said: "Ninety-five per cent of the French want Great Britain to win the war. The only thing that can turn them away from that attitude is starvation. It is utter folly not to realize this. It is playing the German game." His prediction seems already being fulfilled in Admiral Darlan's statement that the "Germans are more generous and comprehensive of the needs of humanity than the English." (Germany has released some wheat to unoccupied France.)

Our State Department cannot maintain with honor the position that the effect of the British blockade on France is no business of ours. We became the economic ally of Great Britain with the passage of the lease-lend bill, if not sooner. Our word carries weight in London. Let us use it to right this cruel (and foolish) policy of starving unoccupied France. ALICE H. MORGAN.

Washington, March 13.

German Housing

Mr. Bolling Somerville in an otherwise admirable letter to The Post of March 13 on "America's Message" speaks of "The Germans, many a whole family of whom were living in one little room," the implication being, I think, that Germany as a nation was short of living space.

Lack of lebensraum has often been put forward by German apologists, and widely accepted by the uninformed, as an underlying cause both of the war of 1914 and that of 1939. In each case it is a pure myth.

The number of inhabitants to the square mile in Belgium and Holland and several other countries is double that of Germany; even in England it is half as great again. In the case of the German colonies, on the loss of which, as an outlet for emigrants not wishing to lose their nationality, so much stress has been laid, not more than about 1 per cent of the pre-1914 population came from Germany.

If German families are, in fact, living in one little room, that is the fault of the German people themselves and of the rulers they tolerate, just as is the lack of butter. They apparently prefer guns to proper housing. From experience, however, with many industrial countries, I should say the German people are better housed than most. ERIC UNDERWOOD.

Of Annexation Of Ireland By The U. S.

For upward of 100 years the Irish-American has been faithfully occupied in saving Ireland. Even though division existed at home, in America all was unity for the cause. With vigor of voice and valiant verse the glory of Irish arms, literature and music was annually declaimed midst exuberance against a background of English tyranny. British brutality, too often inflicted on the Irish by minions to gratify personal spite, was aggravated by incompetent officials, who gave to Ireland the worst case of mismanaged government in Europe. These stupid blunders were related with zealous fervor in every corner of America by orators who were opulent in the use of frightful words. It is only in recent years that England awoke to the damage it had suffered in American public opinion by the true stories, however exaggerated, of English misrule in Ireland.

English liberals in almost every generation sought to ameliorate harsh conditions imposed on Ireland, but with meager success. In 1845 Macaulay in the House of Commons paid tribute to the Catholic priests of Ireland: "Frowned upon by the law, exposed to the insults of every petty squire who gloried in the name of Protestant, yet who performed all their sacred duties amid famine and contagion."

From Macaulay to Gladstone and Churchill, a hundred years in history with only a slow growth in Christian charity from the strong toward the weak, England declined to recognize Irish virtue of courage and character and was applauded by the balance of mankind.

England is now in deepest distress. War in all its brutality falls heaviest on the women and children living in the crowded regions of London and Liverpool, where they daily suffer from bombs and fire, torture and death. As the Irishman looks at his wife and baby he gets no satisfaction out of the knowledge that English womenfolk just beyond the door are being mutilated by Hitler's bombs. He looks uneasily at the heavens and reflects upon the fate of Holland, Denmark and Norway. A former American Minister to Ireland, Cudahy, asserts that 95 per cent of the Irish sympathize with England in her present battle. They fear to manifest their sympathy lest they provoke the wrath of Hitler. If Hitler should decide to strike at England through Ireland, neutrality would be but a ghastly skeleton of defense.

The suggestion has been made of annexation of Ireland to the United States. Objection was offered that Ireland is too far away, yet it is no farther from America than Canada is from England, and the Canadians are happy in their union with the old country. Due to past experience, Ireland wants no more association with England. In the new order of things in Europe Ireland cannot stand alone. England would probably feel relieved if Ireland was admitted to the American Union—certainly would prefer that to Ireland becoming a German satrapy. Ireland cannot resist Germany. Stout hearts and bare hands cannot fight armored tanks and trucks.

Father Tom Burke, distinguished Irish priest and orator, advocated annexation of Ireland by the United States 70 years ago, saying, "America accepts her States on terms of glorious equality." Ireland's friends in America hope for a united Ireland, north and south, acting in concert with the United States "to insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense and promote the general welfare of both lands," an accomplishment almost equal to the adoption of our Constitution.

Thoughtful students of history, lovers of Ireland, are asking the question, "Will Ireland remain a divided waif, subject to alien military yoke, or go 'all-America?'"

Sherwood Anderson

WHEN I READ of Sherwood Anderson's death I experienced the shock that comes to one only with the loss of something personal, something dear. Not that I knew Anderson personally. I had met him only twice, and in an impersonal sort of way both times. But these two times were sufficient to plant his picture firmly in my mind—the picture of a man who carried his greatness with an unmatched simplicity and unpretentiousness.

ONE OF these occasions was a talk given by Theodore Dreiser in New York. Dreiser, in his lumbering, sighing manner, was holding forth on one of his favorite subjects: the state of things in America. He interspersed his remarks by occasional handkerchief-folding which drew almost as much attention as his comments. When he had warmed up to his talk, however, Dreiser surprisingly enough began to display some humor. He showed up the magnates of American industry for what they really were: The creator of a large, Nation-wide chain of department stores in search of a pianola in order to "broaden" his musical culture; a railroad magnate in complete ignorance of the mechanical construction or even existence of rail ties. Dreiser was even seen to smile once or twice in the midst of his heavy, natural gloom.

Then I saw Sherwood Anderson at one of the front seats. Anderson seemed quite absorbed in what Dreiser had to say, although it seemed that a hearty chuckle would break through at any moment at Dreiser's plugging attempts to express himself.

As Dreiser's unorganized discussion went on, I somehow found a connection between Anderson's presence and the speaker's strangely lighter mood. For there was always an abundance of good humor to Anderson. And on this occasion it was bound to radiate to his friend on the stage. Even when Dreiser ran true to form with plaintive, serious statements, Anderson kept to his good-natured smile, as if saying: "Cut out the sob stuff for a change, Theo. It's about time to brighten up a bit. Let's poke a bit of fun at the mess of things which we've always thought of as so tragic and so desperate." In his silence, which was yet not mere silence that evening, there seemed to exist a sort of telepathy between two friends. And in this way, Anderson lightened the burden of both speaker and audience.

ALTHOUGH this was eight years ago, I still recall Anderson vividly as he came up laughingly to Dreiser to congratulate him on his "lecture." He stood there for a while "kidding" the heavy, shaggy-browed figure before him, speaking to him in an intimate, chummy manner. It was this innate friendliness with and interest in people, both great and ordinary, which was Anderson's outstanding quality. And it was the quality, to my mind, which made him a story-teller at heart and gave him the power to create the intimate tales of "Winesburg, Ohio," and the personal, confidential manner of "A Story-Teller's Story."

THE OTHER occasion when I saw Anderson was at a recent talk given by him at a bookshop here in Washington. The place was crowded to capacity. What Anderson had to say was full of informality and rare good humor. To the deep amusement of everybody present, he was bubbling over with anecdotes and entertaining tidbits about the life in the small towns. It was in these small towns that he had always had his real being, and it was in one of these small towns that Anderson had been running a newspaper. From this experience, it seemed, Anderson had culled a wonderful mass of material regarding the quirks and quips of small-town folk. The talk and attitudes of these country folk, their funny reaction to a writer, their strange fears of his writing them up for the "papers" or in his books, these were some of the things he told us in true story-teller's fashion.

One of these reminiscences was about an old farm woman who pressed him to explain his purpose in coming to those parts to settle as a writer.

"Your husband built a house to settle in it; I build a book to settle myself in it."

When Anderson found that this remark was a bit too profound for the country woman, he assured her that his writings would not meddle in her nor in her friends' affairs, and that he wouldn't "report their doings" to the world.

This chat at the bookshop showed us the true Anderson: a life-loving, humanity-loving, genuine artist, streaked with deep, dark laughter at the life about him and its oddities.

IT WAS the way he recounted all this country gossip and goings on, all chock-full of potential stories, which really mattered even more than what he had to say. A laughing twinkle in his eye, with feeling that was genuine and a radiant warmness that was contagious: That was Sherwood Anderson telling his tales to friends or to a more or less strange audience. And then, someday (although in this case, unfortunately, that day was never bound to come), these same tales would be present between the covers of a book.

Although Anderson was not essentially a humorist, he reminded one somewhat of Mark Twain. He had similar talents for creating spontaneously, with a deep fund of pathos and some humor. However, lacking Twain's tragically forced clownishness and possessing a large disdain for "dollar richness," Anderson could never be conceived of as dubbing us "The Damned Human Race." There was too much tenderness and love in the man for that.

A GREAT man and a great writer passed on.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Good Step Forward

WHILE IT IS TRUE that stoppages due to industrial disputes have thus far been less costly than in 1917, it would have been a serious error for the Administration to remain complacent about this favorable comparison. In 1917 the American armament program was superimposed upon an industry which under the pressure of the Allied purchases was already at full employment with a shortage of skilled labor and an inflationary rise in the cost of living. In the spring of 1940, when we began to arm, we were still in the later phases of a depression with unemployment, unused plant capacity, and a deflated price level. The controlling reason why 1940 saw less wage disputes than did 1917 is that there are always less wage disputes during a slump than during a boom.

LIPPMANN

And, therefore, we may be certain that the favorable comparison has been accidental and temporary, that as we are now moving rapidly toward full production and its social consequences, industrial disputes will surely multiply unless more effective measures are taken to prevent and adjust them. In fact, it is already evident that grave disturbances are threatened in many basic industries this spring, and that by midsummer, when industry will be geared to mass production, the situation might easily become critical.

THE EXISTING organization for promoting industrial peace is bound to be unsuccessful in practice because it is fundamentally unsound in principle. If it has not worked badly, that is because conditions have been temporarily and accidentally favorable and because Mr. Knudsen and Mr. Hillman are men of intelligence and good will.

What the President has sought to do is to obtain the cooperation of management and labor in industry by setting up in Washington a dual directorate composed of a cooperating manager and labor leader. This well-intended notion will not work under strain. For it places Mr. Knudsen in the role not of the national director of defense production but in that of the representative of management as distinguished from, and in some sense opposed to, that of labor. And it places Mr. Hillman in the role not of a defense commissioner but of a representative and advocate of labor. The effect is not only to divide authority where undivided authority is most necessary but, even worse, the effect is to divide the personal responsibility both of Mr. Knudsen and Mr. Hillman, making each of them the representative of an interest rather than an executive officer of the National Government.

THE INTENTION, no doubt, was to have management and labor represented in the direction of the defense program. But what should be represented in the planning and direction of production is not the interest of management or the interest of labor but only the national defense itself. The Office of Production Management should see that munitions are produced. Other agencies should worry about the needs and the grievances of capital, of management, of labor, of the consumer. The planning and direction of production requires an undivided attention and an undivided authority which no composite and representative agency can ever have. The new board, which is now proposed, would seem, therefore, to be sound in principle because it separates the specific responsibility for defense production from the general responsibility for maintaining industrial peace and healthy social conditions.

It was a fundamentally bad form of organization, for example, which placed upon Mr. Knudsen and upon Undersecretaries Patterson and Forrestal the task of deciding large issues of tax policy, price policy, financial policy, labor policy, social policy. Their task is big enough—to plan and obtain the production of munitions. The other problems should be settled elsewhere. They cannot manage the whole social economy of the United States.

THE SETTING UP of the new labor board, representing management, labor and the public, should be followed, therefore, by the liquidation of the Knudsen-Hillman duality. The head of the Office of Production Management should be Mr. Knudsen, not as a representative of private management, but Mr. Knudsen as production manager for the United States Government. It is not in the slightest a reflection on Mr. Hillman to say that if he has an executive office in the defense program, it should be not in the role of a labor leader but in that of a citizen—exactly like that of Mr. Knox or Mr. Patterson or any other experienced and accomplished man appointed to national office. In this role labor will be far more truly "recognized" than if he continues to appear in the much less dignified role of a special pleader.

There is a proper place for special pleading, for the representation of interests, and for advocacy. But that place is not in the planning and direction of the defense program. It is in such a board as is now proposed—a board which cannot only mediate in disputes but can become also an organ for proposing to Congress and to the Administration measures to deal with the underlying causes of friction and trouble.

THERE ARE BOUND to be many small and large causes of friction and trouble that must be dealt with, and the establishment of such a representative and independent agency should help to persuade the public to take a practical rather than an emotional and impatient attitude towards organized labor. We must remember that before private industry felt able to accept the defense contracts and go fully to work, it was necessary to make many adjustments which consumed a good deal of time during the summer and autumn. There were the long negotiations about the profit limitations in existing laws, about methods of computing plant amortization, about financing the expansion of plants, and about many other matters of this sort. There will be other problems affecting capital and management as the fiscal and tax programs come along, and there is nothing unworthy or unpatriotic in the effort to find the best possible adjustment between private interest and the defense program.

By the same token it will be well to recognize that labor also has problems which must be taken into account, which must not be dismissed angrily and impatiently. There will be wage problems in which it will be necessary to reconcile large earnings with the need of preventing an inflationary rise in the cost of living. There are problems of recruiting and training new workers, of providing against unemployment in the future, of keeping the workers in the factories fully informed as to what the country needs and why and how they are contributing to it.

OVER AND ABOVE all these things there is needed a sense of the urgency of the hour and with it a revival of confidence in the greatness of the Nation. We have just begun to realize how urgent it is to get on with what we have undertaken. We have a right to realize, because it is the truth, that in spite of all the growing pains of our mobilization, the thing is now really under way. We shall soon be astonished, I believe, at the productiveness of American industry: During ten years of depression we have become so used to thinking badly of ourselves that we do not yet dare to realize what a mighty thing is American industry when its energies are really set in motion. They are, no one need doubt it, in motion at an accelerating tempo which no other industrial system on earth can hope to match.

The Hoover Proposal

THE BRITISH government has issued a statement, replying to—and denying—the proposal of former President Hoover for feeding the women and children of Belgium. The whole of Britain's answer comes down to this one sentence in the closing paragraph:

"Relief of countries in enemy occupation would, whatever the conditions might be, postpone the day of victory."

It may be this is the right answer. This question is within that considerable portion of current problems about which this column does not confidently know the answers. But even if it is difficult to know which of two or more answers is correct, it is entirely possible to be clear about what any one answer means. I is possible to recognize the principle upon which an answer rests. And the meaning of this British answer, stated in terms of military strategy—which is where the British think this question belongs—is this: If denying food to 3,000,000 Belgian women and children will help win the war, then those women and children must be denied food.

I REPEAT, this may be the right answer. It may be that insufficient food for those 3,000,000 is a proper price to pay for—in the British phrase—bringing the "day of victory" closer. But one cannot avoid certain reflections. Is it certain that paying the price—that is, denying food to the Belgians—actually would bring the day of British victory nearer? There are some who think the precise contrary. There are some who think that feeding the conquered peoples would shorten the war—would make British victory more likely and more early. (And also make peace when it comes more sound and more lasting.) Those conquered peoples are being told that it is the British blockade that prevents their getting food. That may be only a half-truth, or even a no-truth. But to the conquered peoples it may sound plausible.

But dismiss all that. The stark fact is that if we accept this British answer, then we accept a very grim principle. We accept the principle that starvation of civilian populations is a legitimate weapon or war. Not starvation of the enemy population—that has always been a weapon. In the present case the British say that starvation of their own friends—the Belgians and other nations that fought for Britain until they were overcome—is a legitimate weapon for the British to use.

MAYBE IT IS. It is ruthless, but this is a war in which, so far, ruthlessness wins. The whole picture of this war and the period leading up to it, ever since Munich, has had a consistent characteristic. Always one side, Hitler, was willing to be ruthless, while the other side, Britain, was not—and Hitler has won every time. At Munich, Britain's Chamberlain was unwilling to precipitate war, while Hitler didn't care. So Chamberlain appeased, and Hitler won. Again, Britain was unwilling to send troops into Norway until and unless Norway requested them. That is, Britain was unwilling to be ruthless. But Hitler was ruthless. Hitler invaded Norway—and Hitler won. As it was with Norway, so it was with Belgium and Holland. It has been the same in phase after phase of the war—Hitler, by willingness to be ruthless, got the advantage, and won.

Maybe Britain can only survive by being ruthless too. Maybe, inasmuch as Hitler has introduced ruthlessness, Britain must adopt it. Maybe ruthlessness on Britain's side, now also our side, is a good sign. Maybe it means that Britain, and we, are now willing to be tough, in a war in which toughness wins, in which toughness is forced upon us as the price of self-preservation.

If so, well and good. All that this column pleads for is clear-sightedness. I have just finished reading and scanning a big docket of speeches and statements which have accumulated about feeding the civilians of the conquered countries. And I am in a momentary mood of distaste for elaborate circumlocutions designed to avoid looking a fact in the face. The fact is that denying food to Belgium is using starvation as a weapon of war.

THERE IS another fact we should look in the face. I have spoken of the denial of food to the Belgians as Britain's answer. It was Britain's answer—at the time it was made, which was March 9. But on the very next day it became America's answer, too. For on the next day, March 10, our lease-lend bill became law. By that law we are in effect Britain's partner in the conduct of the war. Possibly a limited partner—and possibly not so limited as we think. But in any event enough of a partner to have a share in saying what is to be the answer about feeding the Belgians. (And also a share in determining other policies and strategies of the war.)

Up to now, the proper American attitude on this food question was that Britain was fighting the war, that it was Britain's exclusive privilege to say whether feeding the Belgians would or would not facilitate prosecution of the war—that the United States had no right to butt in. But that cannot serve as America's answer today. By signing the lease-lend bill, we took on responsibilities—of which this Belgian matter is only a small part. This also—these responsibilities, all of them, as they arise—we should look in the face.

The Air Tragedies

By Merlo J. Pusey

Temporary Appointments As A Clew

ROBERT H. HINCKLEY, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, appears to have given one clew to the mysterious increase in air-transport crashes since the Civil Aeronautics Authority was reorganized last July. Following the tragic smashup near Atlanta last month, Mr. Hinckley invited the operating heads of the airlines to Washington for a heart-to-heart talk. He reports that they do not favor another reorganization of the CAA. On the contrary, he said, they believe that there have been "too many moves around here already."

PUSEY

Here is an unmistakable hint that the shake-up in the CAA last summer may have had some bearing upon the series of airline accidents which have since claimed the lives of 54 persons. The remarkable safety record achieved by the airlines during the 17 months ended last August came at a time when the CAA was well organized and its inspection machinery was functioning smoothly. In that period not a single fatality occurred on any air-transport line. The disastrous smashups at Lovettsville, Centerville, Utah; Chicago, St. Louis and Atlanta took place during the period of the CAA'S reorganization.

It should be noted, of course, that most of the regulatory machinery set up by the original Civil Aeronautics Authority was preserved by its successor, the Civil Aeronautics Administration. In some respects the new setup seems to offer advantages from the viewpoint of safety in aviation. It brought about a closer relationship between the CAA, the Weather Bureau, the Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Bureau of Standards, all of which are now under the general supervision of Mr. Hinckley as Assistant Secretary of Commerce. Moreover, the technique of making inspections and investigating accidents remains the same. On the surface it appears that the reorganization of the CAA should have had no appreciable effect upon the safety of travel by air.

BUT THERE ARE many intangible factors in a shake-up of administrative personnel. Even if the same men stay on the job during a reorganization, they may work with less efficiency. If the period of transition is prolonged, morale may be severely impaired. No inspector, for example, can be expected to demand rigorous compliance with the rules if he is concerned about his own status and if he can't be certain of full support from his chief. And supervising officials are not likely to follow a vigorous policy when their own positions seem to be lacking in security.

The really astonishing fact about the new CAA is that neither its executive officer nor any one of its six division chiefs has yet been granted a permanent appointment. Several of them are career men, but they are all listed as "acting" directors. These include A. S. Koch, acting director of the vital inspection service. Mr. Koch supervises a large staff of inspectors who check the performance of airplanes, the qualifications of pilots and the adherence of airline companies to the safety regulations prescribed by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

These inspections are the heart of the Government's air-safety program. One of the duties of the CAA inspectors is to sit with pilots on their regular flights to determine whether or not all the rules of safety are observed. They have the dual function of detecting violations of the safety code and of suggesting improvements in that code to the Civil Aeronautics Board. It is easy to see how even a slight letdown in the morale of this group or any confusion as to the backing they will have in making violation reports might lead to a less rigorous observance of safety requirements.

Safety in aviation, said the CAA in its last annual report, can be attained only by "the promulgation and enforcement of the best possible set of minimum safety standards, rules and regulations, and the maintenance of an efficient system of examinations, inspections and certifications . . ." The truth of that statement is not open to question. Indeed, the present CAA this week recognized the primary importance of an effective inspection service by ordering ten of its best men to make a special 90-day survey of all airlines, their equipment and pilots in an effort to forestall repetition of the Atlanta tragedy.

THIS ACTION also suggests some fear in the minds of CAA officials that the routine inspection service is not entirely satisfactory. Their effort to make a more thorough check is commendable, but of course a special survey will not eliminate any disadvantages that may result from confusion and uncertainty at the top. Some inspectors have left the service, apparently in dissatisfaction over the prolonged period of reprganization. Information as to the extent of the turnover cannot be readily attained. There are indications, however, that the turnover is less important than the lack of permanent organization in the inspection service.

After eight months of operation the new CAA has not even issued an organization chart. That fact alone suggests a lack of clearly defined responsibilities. When it is combined with the equally significant fact that the division chiefs have not yet attained a permanent status, confidence in the ability of this organization to enforce safety regulations with full efficiency may be easily shaken.

It is important to remember that fatal accidents in the air are very largely a matter of personnel failure. Not all crashes involve negligence on the part of the pilot or disregard of safety regulations. But even those crackups resulting from mechanical failures or bad weather can be reduced to a bare minimum by proper inspections and scientific use of weather data. It is the business of the Government to make certain that these safety measures are fully applied.

The Congressional committees set up to investigate the recent airline tragedies may thus be expected to give the activities of the CAA a thorough airing. If these inquiries are constructive, they may have a salutary effect upon future safety in the air. At the moment only one point seems to stand out clearly. Efficient regulation certainly cannot be obtained by subjecting the regulatory agencies to frequent reorganizations. Stability is often more important in difficult undertakings of this kind than a theoretically perfect organization.

CONGRESS may easily blunder, therefore, if it tries merely to decide whether the old independent CAA or the new CAA in the Department of Commerce affords the best pattern for an aviation-control system. The real question seems to be whether the poor showing of the new CAA to date is merely incident to its reorganization or whether it indicates fumbling that cannot be overcome by an administrative agency for aviation within the Department of Commerce.

Dissenting John

Old John T. Flynn, one of the country's foremost "aginners," is now in the forefront with the America First Committee. We have known John for years and never knew a time when he wasn't agin something with great force and frantic gestures. We have known him in the interludes when he was agin Coolidge, agin Hoover, agin Jack Dempsey, agin Wall Street, agin the Long Island Railroad, agin the preceding foursomes on golf courses, agin one-half of one per cent beer, agin traffic lights, and agin listening.

We remember John in but one brief interlude of contentment and satisfaction. That was when he once got into purple tights and carried a spear in a Ringling Brothers circus over in Brooklyn directly ahead of the elephants. We have often wondered what a change it would have made in John if he "had stood in them tights."

Miami had some pretty raw weather this season, and it is Jerome Carney who reports that the phone girl in his New York hotel got him up one morning with a motherly "And you'd better put on your heavy overcoat; it's real Miami weather out."

The ASCAP appears to have lost its battle. It had the right music but the wrong words.

President Roosevelt is serving his ninth year in the White House. He can remember away back when the country's troubles were comparatively trivial.

Honor Of The Service

NO DOUBT it was reaching for the moon to wish that politics and the civil Government were imbued with the same spirit of honor and governed by the standards of responsibility that rule the lives of the regular officers of the Army, the Navy and the Marine Corps. In that case, in some important respects, we would have something very like perfection, because graft by an officer is so rare as to be scandalous when it is revealed. Not only is the grafter himself disgraced when he is caught and convicted, but even his family partakes of his humiliation and his name is passed on from generation to generation of officers. So few have they been who have been dismissed in shame for betrayal of their trust that their names and the circumstances of their wrongdoing can be remembered offhand.

One officer who was convicted many years ago has never ceased to fight to clear his name.

By contrast, the grafter in politics seldom is even reproached by the people and often is admired for getting away with it year after year.

An officer of the Army, for example, who paid an income tax far in excess of his total salary and who obviously was accepting bribes from companies selling goods to the Army or gifts from subordinates as the price of commendations leading to their promotion would not be allowed to brazen things through as the mayors of three of our principal cities have done in comparable circumstances in recent years.

The officer would have to explain his income not only to the Internal Revenue but to his superiors, and even if he were not convicted he probably would be forced to resign or, anyway, retire.

A really careful officer would think twice about accepting as little as a box of cigars or a case of liquor from anyone whose motives might be doubtful. If he should permit any member of his family to write insurance or completion bonds for private companies doing Government work under his authority, his honor and his standing among his colleagues certainly would suffer. I am not sure he could be tried on charges in such cases, but I suppose a scrupulous officer—and most of them are that—could be expected to place on record somewhere his repudiation of the transaction.

In singling out the regular service here I have no intention to suggest that the Reserve, Guard or emergency officers are distinctly less honorable as a group. But they do come from civil life, in which the standards—in business and the professions as well as in politics—are less severe.

Consequently, if irregularities due to dishonesty, as distinguished from bad judgment, are discoverd in the inevitable investigation some day of the vast spending which is now in progress, militarized civilians probably will be at fault. For it is a fact—say what we will—that under the spoils system the very honesty of the people has been corrupted to such a degree that practices which, by service standards, are plainly dishonorable pass without challenge.

The officer gets rather decent pay but is a poor man by comparison with civilians of the social set with whom he associates in his middle years. The civilian, however, has to take economic risks, whereas the officer has a steady job for life at a steadily, if slowly, rising rate of pay. His social security is written into the terms of his original hire. When he is through, unless he has voluntarily quit or has been fired out for cause, he has his pension, and all the while he gets some extras in the way of housing and discounts which pad his way. But over a whole career his life certainly is not luxurious, and Army wives, unless they have private incomes, are not competitors for the title of best-dressed women.

Yet, patriotic as they are and honest to a spectacular degree by comparison with politicians, they couldn't give good government under a free system, because in that case they would have to enter politics. And while it certainly is true that they play politics within their own circle, our system generally shields them from the temptations and ravages of our outer, or public, politics. They are, in a sense, wards of the Government, and where they do govern they do so by powers received from the political Government and by rules and methods which could not be imposed on civilians, except in emergencies such as civil commotion.

Possibly I contradict myself in wishing that our public politicians were as honest as the regular officers and admitting that the officers themselves couldn't be that honest if they had to cope with politics. Perhaps so, but I could be willing to settle for just a trace of that honesty in public affairs.

The Major Freedoms

By Harold J. Laski

Britain's Protection Of Civil Liberties

London.

PROTECTION of civil liberities must be a vital preoccupation of a Britain which proposes to emerge from the war with democratic foundations uninjured. The government has powers little short of absolute over the lives and property of its citizens. How has it used those powers?

LASKI

From letters which have reached me from the United States it is clear that there are some people who have judged our position rather in terms of the powers conferred on the executive than in terms of the latter's exercise of them. Some incidents, above all, perhaps, suppression of the Daily Worker, have struck their imagination and they have assumed that the war powers of the executive have deprived us of major freedoms. It seems to me a matter of interest and importance to analyze use of the emergency powers by the cabinet. Only that way can foreigners get a real perspective with regard to our situation.

I take, first, freedom of the press. Here two papers, both of them Communist, have been suppressed. In each case suppression has been by an executive act from which there is no appeal to a court of law. I myself regretted that an alternate regulation which permits such appeal was not used by the home secretary. In the debate in the House of Commons on his decision, however, he was upheld by an overwhelming majority.

Under the regulation which permits prosecution of persons charged with creating alarm and despondency there have been 105 cases. In only 20 of these sentences of imprisonment varying from one day to three months have been imposed. In the remaining cases the offenders were either bound over or fined, and in 12 of them the case was dismissed by magistrates. In 14 of the cases where fines were imposed, those on review by the home secretary have either been remitted or reduced.

UNDER THE regulation dealing with acts of sabotage there have been four convictions, all, significantly enough, occurring in June, 1940. Two of the accused were sentenced to three months' imprisonment and two were fined.

Under the regulation dealing with power over processions and public meetings, public processions of a political character have been denied in London (as they have been largely since the Fascist riots of 1936) but not elsewhere. Three meetings have been prohibited in the whole country.

A drastic regulation gives the home secretary power to detain persons whose conduct and views make it seem likely they may be guilty of action prejudicial to the safety of the realm. Under this power some 500 persons who possess British nationality but are of Italian origin and were believed in sympathy with the enemy were interned at the outbreak of the war. About 200 of these have since been released.

About 700 persons have been interned because they were active supporters of the British Union of Fascists—Sir Oswald Mosley's organization. About 400 of these, mostly lesser fry, have since been released. About 400 persons have been detained because, owing either to their hostile origin or associations, there was ground to believe they were in sympathy with the enemy. Of these, 130 have since been released.

The total number of persons now under detention as the result of orders by the home secretary is 929, of whom 790 are men and 139 women. All of them have been informed of the charges against them and have been permitted to state their case against detention to the powerful advisory committee in the home office, over which the eminent liberal lawyer Norman Birkett, K. C., presides. Most of the releases ordered by the home secretary have been the outcome of this committee's recommendations.

Two other classes merit a word. There have been some hundreds of cases of investigation of persons by the police resulting, on occasion, in search of premises and examination of persons. These have been the outcome, in more than 90 per cent of the cases, of information sent to the police of the alleged offense of signaling to enemy airplanes on the part of the person investigated. The duty of investigation in cases of this kind cannot, I think, be denied. It cannot, either, be denied that there have been occasions on which the police have acted with stupidity and harshness.

There have been a considerable number of cases in which conscientious objectors have been dismissed from employment as the result of their attitude. The proper comment to be made here is that in not a single case has an employe of the government been dismissed; and that there have been notable instances in which Mr. Ernest Bevin has appeared to urge claims before the tribunal of officials of his ministry. The dismissals that have taken place have been the result of decisions by private firms and local authorities or, in one lamentable instance, the British Broadcasting Corporation. In none of these instances has the government the power to interfere in the authority of the employers, public and private, concerned.

PLEAS HAVE been made that the power of the government should have prevented these dismissals by law. To this there are two answers: First, that interference would have constituted a dangerous precedent; and, second, there were occasions when an attempt to enforce such a principle would have resulted in strikes. I myself just had to arbitrate in a case where five men refused, on conscientious grounds, to participate in application of an order for fire fighting. As they admitted, they have blacked out their own houses, which is simply another form of the same thing. I found against them; and I am not able to see that I violated any principle of civil liberty thereby.

An important issue has just arisen over the decision of the B. B. C. not to employ any person supporting the Peoples' Convention, recently formed and Communist-inspired organization to promote revolutionary defeatism. The decision has aroused wide protest already. It has been condemned by the Liberal and the Labor press and it is to be discussed in the House of Commons shortly. There can be no doubt that it is an indefensible decision utterly alien from the government's attitude to those of its employes who participated in or have given support to the convention.

This is the record as it stands so far. Roughly, this is to say that some 1,600 citizens are or have been detained for various periods; some 150 for periods not exceeding three months. As one to whom civil liberty is a matter of deepest urgency I cannot believe that any one with a sense of proportion can regard these figures as indicative of a desire in the executive to menace the freedom of the citizen. There have been stupidities and even brutalities on the part of the police. One or two magistrates in "alarm and despondency" cases have played the fool on the bench. More than that the record does not permit anyone seriously to claim. In the most important case, that of a well-known Communist figure, I myself carefully investigated the issue and I should myself have ordered his internment on the evidence. I add that, on that evidence in either Germany or the Soviet Union his execution would have been inevitable. I do not, therefore, accept the view that he is a martyr of a government careless of working class liberties. On the contrary, the mildness of his treatment is in striking contrast to the seriousness of his offense.

THESE TWO BOULEVARDIERS DIDN'T OVERLOOK IRMA'S BLONDE BEAUTY

Ziegfeld Blonde Comes to Town, Gets the Eye Over Cold Shoulders

A practical demonstration has proved as slightly fanciful the public's conception that a really gorgeous blonde will stop traffic or make a bulldog break his chain.

However, Gorgeous Blond Miss Irma Wilson, of the new movie, "The Ziegfeld Girl," pausing a moment yesterday at Fourteenth and F Streets, proved that such as she will make men young, middle-aged the aged and infirm pause on their way to work or to meet their wives by way of getting in a gander over the shoulder.

Miss Wilson is all that the songs were written about. Terrific power was generated by hair and blue eyes, but traffic flowed in the streets and longing looks were the whole reaction. Civil discipline kept a tight rein.

One thousand girls tried for 12 parts in the movie, "The Ziegfeld Girl." Miss Wilson, already in Hollywood, was one of the winning 12. She is still single, somehow, though a few have proposed to her. Why she turned them down might be used to prove what blondes prefer. But she only put it this way, "I wasn't in love with any." Demonstrating nothing more than that blondes prefer to be first of all in love with the guy.

Anthony Discusses Marital Problems

That thing called "love" was declared to be wonderful but cause of much trouble by an authority here yesterday. And 500 women from Washington's best addresses hung on the words.

Marriage, the crux of love, said John J. Anthony, Town Hall speaker, is the goal of every normal person. He is the author of "Alimony Exposed" and "Marriage Retrieved."

At this point Anthony, dapper in well-tailored blue serge, scotched what he termed the "malicious rumor" he is not living with his own wife.

Back to more general aspects, Anthony said he couldn't help sympathizing with a little infidelity when one or the other of a married couple outgrows physically or intellectually his or her mate. This, however, is in the more delicate zones of practitionership and was hurried across in public clinic.

More basically, the first law of marriage was called self-sacrifice. Economics and sex were the two basic problems. The former can't be solved, but may be alleviated. The sex angle of husband-wife difficulty was called more open to solution. The husband was said to have the best of marriage, though woman was called the superior animal.

ANTHONY GIVES FORTH

A clinician, Anthony once inquired of 1,800 persons "Why are you getting married?" Many said, "I don't know." Four women said they did so, expecting nothing. "They will be happy," said Anthony.

"Love is a wonderful thing," Anthony continued. And marriage, he confided, will be a success if the academic definition of gentleman and gentlewoman is applied by each to the relationship. And for that relationship there should be training. It requires it. A stenographer would not approach her career without preparation, he insisted.

The ladies sent up their questions on folded, unsigned bits of paper. Question: Is love enough to make a successful marriage? Answer: Yes. Love is 80 per cent of any marriage. Question: Do you think children cause the separation of husbands and wives? Answer: It cements them. Sometimes the wife (or vice versa) begins to pay more attention to the children than to her husband. It is the husband's fault. You can't blame the children. Question: I have been married one week and my wife has decided she should enjoy life outside as before. Should I let her do it? Answer: We don't hold our wives by force. The only time a wife does that is when she thinks she will find more interest outside than in.

Laughter Is What It Is At the Earle This Week

'Honeymoon for Three,' on the Screen, And 'Streets of Paris,' on the Stage, Add Up to a Barrel of Boisterous Fun

"HONEYMOON FOR THREE," Warner Brothers picturization of the play by Alan Scott and George Haight, adapted to the screen by Earl Baldwin, costarring Ann Sheridan and George Brent, with Charles Ruggles, Osa Massen, Jane Wyman, William T. Orr, Lee Patrick, Walter Catlett, Herbert Anderson and Johnny Downs. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. At the Earle Theater.

SPEAKING OF "SLEEPERS," as practically everybody has been in connection with "Night Train," there is another one on the silver sheet at the Earle Theater this week.

This passively heralded Warner Brothers comedy of "Honeymoon for Three" is one of the most delightfully hilarious items to reach a local screen this season. Announced merely as Earl Baldwin's adaptation of a play by Alan Scott and George Haight, with additional dialogue by Julius J. and Philip G. Epstein, it turns out to be an expanded and enlivened version of "Goodbye Again," that rollicking stage piece in which the late Osgood Perkins achieved one of his laughing successes on the boards of the National not too many seasons ago. It has been sparked by new situations of high voltage and "juiced" by the high-tension performances of a capricious cast, headed by Ann Sheridan and George Brent and stellar in caliber all the way down the line.

BELL

The story, if you remember—or even if you don't—is the one about the famous best-seller author and lecturer, who encounters an old college romance upon his one-day speaking visit to Cleveland. To the girl he had casually wooed eight years before he has remained an idealized hero, constantly held up as the knight in shining armor to the meek and melancholy little fellow she married on the rebound. Julie Wilson is on Kenneth Bixby's neck the instant he hits the town in a moment of inadvertence. It seems the expedient thing to Author Bixby to ignore all other prearranged appointments in order to do something or other about Julie and her radiant romanticism. It seems expedient to Harvey Wilson, the humble husband in the case, to get at least one look at this tower of all the virtues who has been so unfailingly flaunted in his face all these years. It seems expedient to a great many other people to horn into this explosive situation in a great variety of extremely exhilarating ways. Out of it all has been evolved a farcical film that is alive with sparkling dialogue, sprightly action and superlative spoofing.

If, heretofore, you have looked upon George Brent as a serious actor, not to be included in the first flight of the cinema's comedians, "Honeymoon for Three" will change your mind. His Kenneth Bixby is a bedazzled and befuddled fellow, who glibly gabs his way into more complications than there are on an income tax blank. As his efficient, patient and sometimes petulant secretary, Ann Sheridan makes plain what a loss it is to her, her studio and the public that she should be feuding with her bosses. We were impressed by Miss Sheridan in "Torrid Zone." We are more impressed now by her competence and versatility in a role that makes it plain that Miss Sheridan does not have to be "tough" to be trenchant. Osa Massen, who sprang to momentary prominence with Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray in "Honeymoon in Bali," is superfine, as the infatuated Julie Wilson, and Charlie Ruggles, in the penurious Milquetoast role of her husband, turns in one of his most comic and contagious performances. William T. Orr, as the overstuffed young attorney; Jane Wyman, Lee Patrick and Walter Catlett, as a waiter whose life Mr. Bixby virtually ruins, are the foremost members of a supporting cast that never makes a mistake.

On the stage at the Earle this week, the compressed "Streets of Paris" retains a few of its more important contours and the two stars who scored so emphatically when the exotic musical first was presented in the Capital at the National. These zanies would be Sid Marion and Cliff Hall, who succeeeded Abbott and Costello and are just as funny. Master Marion is that diffident little guy with the wobbly hats, slyly sibillant voice and unquenchable desire to find that number on the Rue de la Paix. Mr. Hall is his ample and annoying "straight man." Together they still have a high time with the "old army game" and that "Crazy House" business. "Think-a-Drink" Hoffman also continues to bewilder the patrons by the amazing fertility of his cocktail shakers, and the "Three Little Maids" vocally triumph in their conclusions that Paris is a bust compared with Kankakee, Petch and Deauville, and Ernesto and Talia, dancers in different moods and tempos; Ann Crosby, ballerina; Peggy Alexander and Don Richards, a lusty young barytone, have a great deal to do with perpetuating the popularity of the original music and movement of a Broadway hit that has shrunk considerably but still retains something of the breath of life.

The Lombardi music from the orchestra pit and a particularly complete and interesting newsreel round out a bill that was designed exclusively for laughter and fulfills its purpose with more than ordinary proficiency.

Well, Who Wouldn't, With Annie?

ANN SHERIDAN AND GEORGE BRENT

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 14 (INS).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor are to have the first preview of George Bernard Shaw's "Major Barbara" at Nassau. All of the swank society of the eastern seaboard and the island will assist and the proceeds will be turned over to the British War Relief. It seems Gabriel Pascal, the producer, showed the Windsors "Pygmalion," the first Shaw movie, when they were in exile in France and the Duke complimented Pascal, saying "Will you promise to show me your next picture?" So the producer, who is in New York now, got in touch with the Duke and the preview was arranged.

PARSONS

"Major Barbara" again stars Wendy Hiller with Robert Morley in one of the principal roles. It was made in the midst of bombing blitzkriegs on London and under extremely trying circumstances, but Shaw again gave it his approval. We'll see it when United Artists release it after the Nassau preview and after it is shown at Miami Beach, March 25.

Ginger Rogers has been a very sick girl. The excitement of winning the Academy award, plus an extreme nervousness, has kept her off the set of "Tom, Dick and Harry" for over a week. Little has been said about her illness and probably it wouldn't have become known if she hadn't failed to appear at the Motion Picture Mothers' party of which her mother, Mrs. Lela Rogers, is the president. Everyone knows how Ginger adores Lela and when she didn't come to the party her illness was revealed. "Tom, Dick and Harry" is the picture which Garson Kanin will finish before he is drafted in the Army. Ginger is expected to return to the studio Monday.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Norma Shearer has been in New York shopping for two days; the Duncan Renaldos have a date with the stork and so have the Jack Dawns. He is M-G-M's makeup expert; Lila Lee is returning to Hollywood to make a screen comeback; Bruce Cabot, stepping out with a girl named Jean Ames, cracked, "Wouldn't you know I'd fall for a girl named Ames?" His former wife's name is Adrianne Ames.

Annabella is set for a test at Paramount for Maria in "For Whom the Bell Tolls;" Pat Walthall, daughter of "The Little Colonel" and the former Mary Charleston, and Mario Cueto were wed today. They will live in South America; Max Gordon is in town to discuss "My Sister Eileen;" Florence Rice and John McClain talking things over at the Brown Derby; J. Carrol Naish will surprise audiences throughout the country when he sings on his personal appearance tour and does a comedy act. He is usually seen as a heavy.

Mrs. Wesley Ruggles received word today that Paulson, who owned the famous Cafe de Paris in London, was killed in a direct hit on the cafe; William S. Hart has loaned Bob Taylor a gun from his collection—one used by the original Billy the Kid; Countess Di Frasso sends word to Hollywood friends that she is in Palm Beach; Carole Landis and Tim Durant a Ciro twosome.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Leonard Lyons:

New York, March 14.

JOHN STEINBECK is planning to fly to London in May. The author of "The Grapes of Wrath" expects not only to report the war, but also find material for a new book, about modern, civilized humans who are forced to live in the catacombs of a great city . . . Steinbeck's financial needs for the future have been provided for, from the royalties and movie sale of his book. His manner of living hasn't been changed—and at that rate, he has enough cash on which to live for the next 20 years. After that, annuities will pay him $150 a month . . . In Hollywood last month Donald Friede offered Steinbeck the best contract ever offered a writer. A studio was willing to pay him $50,000 a year, for 3 years, in return for only 8 weeks' work each year . . . "That's quite generous," said Steinbeck, rejecting it, "but, you see—I don't need money."

THE RADIO CHAINS have declined to broadcast a series sponsored by the British government, which was to be called "Tonight in Britain," dramatizing the events of the day. The radio officials explained: "We don't want to be accused of undue excitement of the public" . . . "Mort. Post," who reviews mystery-novels for The New Republic, is Bruce Bliven, editor of that publication. When Bliven was aked why his politico-economic periodical broke its tradition by featuring a mystery novel department, he said: "In times like these, even the intellectuals want a little escape from reality."

AT THE REHEARSALS of Lillian Hellman's new play, "Watch on the Rhine," Paul Lukas saw George Coulouris sitting on a chair, in the center of the stage . . . Lukas pointed to the 187-pound Coulouris, and then told Herman Shumlin, the producer: "I'll bet you $25 that I can lift the chair, with George in it—and I'll do it with one hand" . . . The bet was made, and Lukas did it . . . Then he revealed that once, years ago, he represented Hungary at the Olympics game—as a weight-lifter.

THE LARGEST income tax ever paid by a writer since the income tax law was first enacted was paid yesterday—by Ernest Hemingway . . . The editors of PM, incidentally, have been unable to get any message to Hemingway, who last was heard from in Hong Kong. And Neville, its correspondent with Wavell's army in Africa, also is missing . . . Beatrice Kaufman is the new assistant to the publisher of PM, in charge of special features . . . Clare Boothe has obtained her passport, but can't get the visa she wants—for Germany . . . Deanna Burbin's newest movie, "Nice Girl," concludes with her singing "Thank You, America." For the British version of the film, she'll substitute another song, "There'll Always Be an England."

EARLIER THIS SEASON Chester Erskine directed a play produced by Louise Carpenter, in which Milli Monti was to have been featured . . . The play was withdrawn, before its Broadway premiere . . . DuPont money financed the production, and so one preview performance was scheduled to be given, privately, for the duPonts, in Wilmington . . . Erskine had little faith in the show, but was proud of one realistic touch he had achieved—the noise of antiaircraft guns being fired offstage . . . Irenee duPont and other members of his family witnessed that private showing. When it was over he approached Erskine and offered but one criticism. "The play is quite good," said the munitions expert, "but that business of the guns—bad . . . bad . . ."

IN THE NEW Fredric March picture, "So Ends Our Night," the role of the Gestapo agent in this anti-Nazi story is played by an actor who receives no screen-credit. His name is William von Brinken . . . It's coincidence, of course, but during the last war a military attache at the Embassy in Washington was interned here under the espionage act. He was a Baron, named Wilhelm von Brincken. After the war he was released, and the newspaper clippings show that he then went to Hollywood and interested himself in the motion picture industry.

Gay Nineties Revive Selves On Met. Screen

Ever since the first flicker was ground out, picture making has concentrated on recapturing things past. From "The Lost World" to the latest thriller on legalized destruction, a fascination about the ever-present past has permeated the Youngest Industry. Small wonder, then, that "The Strawberry Blonde," with its turn-of-the century atmosphere moved into the Metropolitan yesterday for appetites merely whetted by its earlier run at the Earle.

Real wonder is how "The Strawberry Blonde" recaptures the buoyancy and verve so invariably lost in the shuffle of history. A skillful background of the songs of the period—"The Band Played On," "On a Sunday Afternoon," and one or two others whose tunes are familiar—lay a foundation for James Cagney and Olivia de Havilland to work wonders with. One expects such necessary vitality from Cagney and gets it; but it's Olivia de Havilland, gentle Olivia, who surprises with her gay banter. She gives the Mauve Decade a blood transfusion with the way she says "exactly."

You may recall "The Strawberry Blonde" as the potential home-wrecker of James Hagan's play and film of several years ago, "One Sunday Afternoon." Biff Grimes was a dentist who had wondered for years whether he hadn't married the wrong woman and only woke up to his good fortune when he extracted an aching bicuspid from the fellow who'd married the girl of his heart. Its tone was distinctly nostalgic.

An Edgar Kennedy comedy, "It Happened All Night," that's silly enough to miss, and some excellent Paramount News shots of the British in Eritrea supplement a picture you don't need to be beyond shaving age to enjoy. R. L. C.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, March 14.

Charlies Smith, the unforgettable little office smart alec in "The Little Shop Around the Corner," was tested for the part of Dizzy in "Henry for President." Incidentally, it's one of the funniest scripts I've read. Charlies didn't hear from the studio, but he read somewhere that Charlie Peck got the part, and being a good sport, called the casting office to get Peck's phone number in order to congratulate him. Casting had never heard of Peck. "Who's gonna play Dizzy in 'Henry for President?'" Smith asked. "Guy named Charlie Smith," was the answer. Jimmy Lydon, ho was so good in "Tom Brown's Schooldays," plays Henry.

HOPPER

No wonder our distinguished visitors become dewhaskarted and sour on our town. A famous hostess the other night entertaining Somerset Maugham (who wrote fabulous stories of the South Seas—"The Trembling of a Leaf," from which "Sadie Thompson" was taken, which later became "Rain," "The Letter," and dozens of others; said naively to Mr. Maugham, "Tell me, have you ever been to the South Seas?" "No," said he, "only to the Beaches."

Robert Bosworth made "The Sea Wolf" in 1913 for $32,000. Then Milton Sills did two versions of it, a silent and a talkie. Now Eddie Robinson's completed "The Sea Wolf" at a cost of over a million. But the first one who called up for a preview reservation was Hobart Bosworth. Yes, it was Hobart who first saw the wolf—before it had any expensive pups.

John Garfield's going to have his hands full when the contingent of girls from Stephens College hits Hollywood. He's invited nine of them to lunch with him simultaneously.

John was telling me that he's just gifted his baby with an Irish setter. "It was certainly a bargain," he said. "I paid 15 bucks for it—and the baby thinks I've given her a horse."

When Archie Mayo called Cesar Romero before the camera in "The Great American Broadcast," Cesar said, "O. K., Arch. What kind of expression will I wear?"

The Bumpsteads en masse—Blondie, Dagwood, Baby Dumpling, and Daisy, the dog—went to Dallas to do their doggoned best for the British War Relief. Also Errol Flynn, who hoped to share Daisy's spotlight. He was glad to get out of town after doing that fan magazine article on Hollywood playboys. Imagine one of them telling the truth at last! You won't believe it, but we're really getting places in our town.

I'll admit the posters of Earl Carroll's puss and the line "For Whom the Belles Toil" is funny, but much funnier is the sign on Sunset which reads, "Be measured for pleasure. De humor analyzed" . . . Incidentally, Carroll's line isn't new. Walter Winchell pinned it on Billy Rose months ago.

Jimmy Van Heusen, who with Johnny Burke finished the musical chores for "The Road to Zanzibar," used to call his New York publishers weekly to see how his music sales were going. "I'm a reformed character," says Jimmy. "Every time I called, my Hollywood pals got on the line and talked to all their pals, and my telephone bill looked like the one for national defense."

When I was talking to Alfred Hitchcock on the "Before the Fact" set, Eddie Conrad, in full Indian make-up for another picture, came in to visit. When the cameras started rolling on a strictly English scene between Cedric Hardwicke and Cary Grant, Hitchcock sent Conrad in to do an Indian war dance in the background. "What in the world is that for?" I asked. "Oh, just to bedevil the cutters," explained "Hitchy," who loves practical jokes.

"WORK, FOR THE NIGHT IS COMING"
— — — ANNA L. COGHILL — — —

Work, for the night is coming,
Work through the morning hours;
Work while the dew is sparkling,
Work 'mid springing flowers;
Work while the day grows brighter,
Under the glowing sun;
Work, for the night is coming,

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

The author of this hymn was born in Canada where summers are short and call forth every bit of energy to get the crops harvested before the early frosts. The theme is taken from the words of Jesus, "The night cometh when no man can work"—a challenge to use to the utmost all the time that we have.

Corrective Make-up Is Key to Beauty

With emphasis on naturalness in makeup this season, there's only one way to achieve it—know your face. Study it carefully in the mirror. Decide whether it is round, square, diamond, triangular or oval shaped. Once armed with this knowledge you can do a deft job of makeup. You can create any illusion of shape you desire. Perc Westmore director of makeup for Warner Brother's Studios in Hollywood, has been preaching and practicing this theory for months. Most of the actresses benefit by his corrective technique. Now Mr. Westmore makes his advice practical and adaptable to all women who will follow his suggestions. The diagramed photographs below give specific directions for applying make-up to the round, square, diamond and inverted triangle shaped faces. If you have a perfect ovel shaped face, you're lucky for yky for your's is considered the ideal

Geraldine Fitzgerald (above) is a perfect example of the inverted triangle face. For her and others with this type of face Perc Westmore suggests the following make-up which also is suitable and applicable to the long face.

1—Dress hair in an easy style on top, with fullness at a point above and back of ears. The full portion should be on a line with the mouth to create width in the lower face. A soft dip decreases width of the forehead.

2—Place rouge on highest point of cheekbones; keep it deeper in tone near temple, fainter in the lower face.

3—Eyebrows should be natural and not too thin, starting directly above inside corners of the eyes.

4—Arch the mouth slightly, keeping the indentation in the upper lip softly curved and the mouth natural.

Brenda Marshall, Hollywood star (above) illustrates the diamond shaped face. Principal problems for her and those with faces of this type is to reduce width across the cheekbone line. These are your instructions:

1—Fullness of the hair must be kept above and below the ears and dressed snugly at the cheek line.

2—Rouge should be applied on the highest point of the broad cheekbone, blended carefully in a circular field. Avoid carrying the rouge into the hollows of the temple and the lower part of the cheek.

3—The eyebrow, kept natural, is arched slightly and not too wide giving the forehead an illusion of natural width.

4—Use a natural lip makeup. The mouth should be gently curved and not too wide. This supplies an impression of width across the lower part of the face.

2—Starting on line directly above inside corner of eyes arch eyebrows slightly and curve them naturally.

3—Apply rouge to outer portion of the cheek, carrying it up toward the temple and down toward the jaw, which it shades very faintly. Since dark rouge creates shadow and reduces width, the darkest tone possible should be used.

Ann Sheridan, Hollywood star (above) epitomizes the square type of face. If yours is similary shaped, observe the following dos and don'ts for make-up.

1—Dress hair softly with fullness at sides to minimize the sharp angle of the jaw. Create as many soft curves in the face and hair as possible to counteract the squareness of the features.

2—Place rouge in a circle under the eye and carry back toward the ear, also down under the jawline very slightly to create a shadow on the most prominent part of the lower face.

3—Keep eyebrow lines natural with just a slight arch in opposition to the straight lines of the face. They should be started directly above the corner of the eye.

4—The mouth should be made as wide as possible, curved upward at the corners.

Use of Tapeline Is Advised In Shopping for Furniture

By Elizabeth McRea Boykin

It's excusable to try to fool some of the people some of the time. But never fool yourself, lady dear—at least about important things. Trusting the eye too much in shopping for furniture is one way a lot of us fool ourselves . . . the decorating experts use tape lines and samples as a doctor uses a thermometer, not trusting the eye or the touch.

It's especially important to use a tapeline when buying furniture, for without it we're likely to buy pieces that don't fit the space available. And furniture should fit with as much aplomb as a custom-tailored suit if it's to look right.

Start With a Diagram

The most practical plan for fitting furniture to a room is to make a scale diagram of the layout, then scale cutouts of cardboard of the furniture. That way you can juggle the furniture around to see how it fits and looks in different places without scratching the floor or indulging in strong arm work.

A convenient scale to use for both room plan and furniture cutouts is ½ inch to the foot, though 1 inch to the foot gives more leeway if you have some big sheets of paper available. In addition to arranging the furniture on the floor plan, you'll need to keep in mind its height in placing old pieces or buying new ones.

The few rules for arranging furniture are all made to be broken, if you feel like it. But they serve as guides and warnings. To make the room seem larger, keep the furniture back against the wall. To increase the intimacy and friendliness of a large room, pull the furniture out from the wall.

Achieving Unity

To achieve unity, arrange the furniture around some focal point or center of interest—a fireplace, a pleasant window, a big mirrored wall, a fine breakfront cabinet, a tier of book shelves or a flower place kept filled with plants or fresh flowers.

To make the room restful, don't forget balance in the arrangement—that is, placing furniture, lamps and pictures with regard to weight and line; pairs of chairs, pairs of lamps, pairs of tables are an easy way to achieve this, but balance can also be more subtle, created by a feeling or mood rather than by actual symmetry . . . this is called asymmetry or occult balance. An important "don't" in furniture arrangement is—don't place furniture cater-cornered or diagonally across the corners.

Hang Plates on Wall

A charming arrangement of plates on a wall was exhibited recently in a model room. Ribbon scrolls were painted on the walls to outline and join the grouping of interesting plates.

Vitamin B Put in White Bread Since Whole Wheat Is Spurned

By Ida Jean Kain

AFTER twenty years' gentle but persistent pressure on the part of the nutritionists, it seems fairly apparent that you can lead the people to appreciate whole wheat bread—but you can't make them eat it. The vast mapority will take their chances with all the 43,046,-720 disease symptoms associated with a Vitamin B deficiency rather than give up white bread.

Under the circumstances, it is just as well the millers, bakers and yeast makers are contriving to put B into white bread and that we can get our full share in the future in spite of overly refined food habits. You have heard about the revitaminized flour. Now you will also hear about reinforced yeast—containing nicotinic acid and iron as well as a high percentage of B1. A loaf of bread made with the new yeast is approximately the food value equivalent of a loaf of whole wheat bread.

Scientific research in both flour and yeast has been going on for some years. But the successful culmination of these experiments for practical purposes has been accelerated by our Government's "all out" plan of diet education as a defense measure. And no doubt the lively interest displayed by foreign powers in such nutritional advances has helped to wake us up to their potentialities.

"Morale Vitamin"

"It's more than a stroke of smart phrasing that Vitamin B is designated as "the morale vitamin." It really does contribute toward making us physically fit and morally strong. Just to give you an idea of its importance, let me tell you of an experiment carried on at the Mayo Clinic.

Six women volunteered to restrict their diet under controlled conditions to reduce the intake of Vitamin B1. They went on a diet composed of white flour, tapioca, sugar, corn starch, washed polished rice, raisins, egg white, cottage cheese, butter, black tea and coffee—plenty of food, but each items was selected solely on the basis that it lacked Vitamin B.

They remained on this diet 88 days in all. But within only ten days they began to develop symptoms of neurasthenia—a condition characterized by fatigue on slight exertion. They had other troubles too, such as indigestion, constipation, pallor, loss of appetite, depression and anxiety.

Vitamin B Necessary

When Vitamin B was returned to their diet, these symptoms promptly disappeared. And when the vitamin was increased—as it was, to nearly twice the normal requirement—they became strikingly more alert, had much greater stamina and manifested a markedly increased feeling of well being.

From all the evidence, it appears that almost ANYTHING can happen on a diet that is lacking in the Vitamin B complex. It's no joke about the 43,000,000-odd symptoms associated with this dietary deficiency.

You deprive your family of a highly valuable protective element when you give them white bread lacking in Vitamin B. Ask your baker or your grocer for the new bread—the kind that is made either with reinforced yeast or with revitaminized flour.

Exotic Food Bits Made With Crackers

THE WORLD would indeed be lost without crispy crackers to serve with drinks, salads and soups. Crackers also take to spreads like a duck takes to water. Here are some spreads to use with crackers.

Cream butter and add dash of celery seed. Just before serving, spread a film of this delicately flavored mixture over freshly toasted crackers. This is excellent with tomato juice.

Chopped chives whipped with light sour cream spread sparingly over toasted crackers make the perfect accompaniment for all fresh vegetables drinks.

A thin film of any of the new sharp cheese spreads on toasted crackers is excellent with tart fruit drinks such as grapefruit, lemon and pineapple juice.

Old Jewelry Is Streamlined At Slight Cost

So you want some new jewelry, but you're short on dollars. Well, don't let that worry you—just look in your trunk. We mean it. Go on a treasure hunt in your old trinket boxes, and you can soon be wearing some smart, new diamond jewelry.

All you need are a few old out-of-date pieces with real stones in them, and with very little time and for very little money any good jeweler will turn them into streamlined clips, brooches or rings.

Don't worry about the metal—gold, silver, and platinum may all be converted. And ignore the age of the gems. Diamonds never die, fade, or discolor. And a good scrubbing always brings back their flashing smile. But jewelry itself does need occasional restyling. Can you imagine wearing a hat or a fur coat ten years, without remaking?

So, no matter how small the gems are or how old the mountings, take the whole collection to the jeweler and let him sketch on paper the magnificent surprise he can create for you. When you see the sketches you can say "Yes" or "No," about having the work completed.

Invitations to 'Showers' Should Be Confined To Close Friends of Honor Guest, Says Woman Who Deplores This Kind of 'Social Racketeering'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I feel impelled to leap into print in defense of "Puzzled," whom you lambasted so thoroughly in Monday's column, for her criticism of a hostess who had invited an ill-assorted, mostly unacquainted group of women to a "lingerie shower" for a bride-to-be. I shall be much surprised if your correspondence doesn't show many of your readers in full agreement with "Puzzled."

I, for one, certainly subscribe to her belief that invitations to any form of "shower" should be confined to close friends of the honor guest,—since the hostess who issues such invitations is putting her guests "on the spot." To decline seems ungracious; while to accept (in the case of a "lingerie shower") means that one must shell out several dollars,—which, for most of us, is no small sum to spend on a person we hardly know. It seems to me, too, that a girl of any sensibility, "honored" in such a way, would be much embarrassed to receive such intimate gifts from mere acquaintances; and that the value of the "haul" could scarcely compensate for her embarrassment.

We used to have "kitchen showers." They were good fun for the guests and (we hoped) of benefit to the bride-to-be. The items cost little in themselves, but the total outlay probably added up to a rather substantial sum. Lately, however, the "kitchen shower" has taken on the coloration of "social entertaining," and a notion prevails that the guest of honor isn't getting her money's worth if the gifts aren't rather expensive.

A few years ago the daughter of old friends of my family got married. She is much younger than I and I hardly knew her. But since I had known and loved her parents for many years, I resolved to give her an extra nice wedding gift. Then, shortly after her engagement was announced, the "showers" began. After attending and contributing to a linen shower, a silver shower, a lingerie shower, a closet shower and a china shower, I was not only too broke to buy her any sort of wedding gift, but I didn't want to! I was filled with an iron determination that when my small daughter grows up and gets engaged her friends and mine shall not be subjected to this form of social racketeering.

As for the party about which "Puzzled" complains,—the hostess may have been a well meaning, hard working, deserving individual, but she certainly was overly-optimistic. I don't think she showed great intelligence in gathering together a large group of women, most of whom had never met before and who appear to have had little in common. I agree with you, Miss Haworth, that one person of exceptional social gifts may carry a failing party to success,—if the party is a small one. But the experienced hostess,—the hostess whose every party is a success,—is the hostess who chooses her guests with the greatest care, for the purpose of bringing together persons who are potentially congenial and have something in common.

Of course, a guest has an obligation to do his part in contributing to the success of a party. But the obligation is mutual. The hostess' obligation consists in providing not merely food and drink but an atmosphere of congeniality as well—an atmosphere and a company that will evoke, without strain, the social gifts of all those present. Sincerely, M. D. K.

What's Sauce for the Goose Should Serve for Gander!

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I agree with your reply of March 7 to "Worried Wife" that the 18-year-old "office vamp" who is pursuing her husband probably is no serious threat to her marital security. But I wonder if you would give the same assurances to a husband who wrote to complain that his wife was indulging in a bold flirtation with a younger man? I realize, of course, that society is more severe in its condemnation of such conduct on the part of women, but I don't think we can afford, even so, to graciously tolerate a husband's incipient infidelity (as described in that instance) to the extent of dismissing it as a "little frailty."

The man's conduct is highly dishonorable if not, indeed, immoral. As all adults know, a "flirtation" is a progressive and not a static phenomenon. And it seems to me if husbands were required by their wives to subscribe to the "single standard," and were given to understand that marriage is over, when and if they start "playing around,"—they would think long and seriously before inviting that penalty. I believe if wives were uncompromisingly advised to take such a stand, it would go far toward discouraging philandering husbands from pursuing the chase.

It seems to me the idea, so prevalent nowadays, that it is the wife's responsibility to match "the other woman" in sweetness, allure, etc., is dangerous diet for a man's ego. A man must think he is a pretty wonderful creature to be able to betray his wife's trust and yet have her continue to exert herself to hold his interest. Since the social code inflexibly holds that an "unfaithful wife" should be discarded, surely it is meet and just that an "unfaithful husband" should be held to the same strict accounting. Surely it is not good to encourage a morally upright wife to forgive, and continue to live with, a morally lax man.

Small wonder husbands stray from the path of rectitude when the philosophy of this age seems to be that a man may play fast and loose with his marriage vows—even to the extent of committing adultery—and yet be viewed as a creature of such special privilege that his wife is warranted in "holding on to him for dear life," especially when he knows if she were caught in the same sin public opinion would rise up and call him justified in discarding her. What is sauce for the goose should be sauce for the gander, and in future, Miss Haworth, I trust you will make this point unmistakably clear in discussing problems of the kind in question. Sincerely, I. M. R.

East Meets West In Spring Hats

East is East and West is West but the two meet in many a Spring hat. Confucius' cronies said—simple, pleasing silhouettes, the mushrooming coolie, the pillbox, the chin-chin turban, the steep pagoda crown, irregular halos, cuffed mandarin shapes. They liked gracious decor-balanced sing-song girl, flower clusters, a regal feather, rich embroidery American milliners agree.

A pillbox of India print silk is twisted into a tasselled peak with matching cuffs and brilliant green veiling. Waxy pink floral pins are thrust through the moulded underbrim of a swirled and side-peaked cartwheel in varying shades of shiny green cheviot straw. Another milliner shapes "Pink Lady" felt into a pagoda crowned, deeply backed picture hat. On its underbrim bouqueted hatknobs mark either side of the new half-way, side-lifted flange.

Teach Yourself To Typewrite

TYPING — almost a business "must" these days! Being a typist, of course, is an excellent job in itself. But in any type of office work—in other fields, too, such as selling—to know how to type well helps you get the breaks.

Learning to type isn't difficult. You can teach yourself the professional touch system, how to type letters and business forms. Then, instead of trying to get by on the "two-finger" amateur method, you have a real skill to offer.

The reason the touch system is so speedy is that it enables you to keep your eyes on the work you're copying without having to look at your typewriter keys.

And with simple exercises your fingers are taught to respond automatically, reaching quickly and exactly to the keys to be struck—and then back to the guide keys.

With practice you soon master your keyboard, progress to letters, statistical material—learning the correct forms for each. You now are ready to aim at a real typing job.

Miss Louise Stillwell Becomes Bride of Randall Hagner, Jr.; Brilliant Reception Follows at the Argentine Embassy

Bishop Freeman Performs the Ceremony In Flower-Decked Grace Church, Woodside, Md. Bride Wears Gown of Heavy White Faille Moire

Less than a year after her debut, which was one of the most important events of last spring, Miss Courtney Louise Stillwell became the bride of Randall Hagner Hagner, jr., at the outstanding wedding ceremony of the Lenten season. The couple exchanged vows yesterday afternoon at 3:30, with a large reception following at the Argentine Embassy.

The bride is the daughter of Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, and of Wellesley H. Stillwell, of Chicago and Wye Hall, Md. Mr. Hagner is the son of Mrs. Randall H. Hagner, of Washington, and the late Mr. Hagner.

Grace Church in Woodside, Md., was the scene of the ceremony, at which the Right Rev. James A. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, officiated. Present were relatives, close friends, and members of the embassy staff, about 100 in all. The church was decorated with white lilies massed at the altar and on the chancel rail. Palms flanked the blossoms and two tall candelabra were placed at either side of the altar.

The pretty young bride wore a gown of extreme simplicity but new in every detail. Fashioned of heavy white faille moire, it had a high neckline, long sleeves which tapered to points over the wrists, and a tightly fitted bodice. The skirt was fitted snugly at the hips and fell in huge folds at the hem, forming a train several yeards in length. The train was faced with a large pleated ruffle and edged with pale blue ribbon.

Bridegroom's Sister Matron of Honor

The bride's cap was a tight white moire cowl edged at the front with a cluster of freesias. From this headdress fell a circular Madonna veil of white tulle. The bride carried a prayer book with long streamers and a cluster of white orchids. She was given in marriage by her brother, Homer A. Stillwell.

Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, sister of Mr. Hagner, was matron of honor, and a younger sister, Miss Isabella Hagner, was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were the Misses Elaine Darlington and Sita Finkenstaedt, who made their debuts the same season as the bride, and Miss Margaret Houghteling.

All were gowned in turquoise blue crepe fashioned with full skirts, tight bodices which formed a girdle, and V-shaped necklines. Military epaulets of silk braid formed the shoulders and a cascade of fringe from beneath the braid fashioned the sleeves.

Their artistic headdresses were garlands of American Beauty roses intertwined with blue Lupin flowers. The blossoms were tied together with pale green ribbon. All carried old-fashioned bouquets of American Beauty roses tied with streamers of the ribbon.

Alexander Hagner Is the Best Man

Alexander B. Hagner served as best man for his brother and the ushers were Samuel Biddle, A. Britton Browne, A. Y. P. Garnett, jr., F. Moran McConihe, Thomas Moorhead, Miguel Quirno-Lavalle, Middleton G. C. Train and George Y. Wheeler II.

Lovely Senora de Espil chose for the occasion a pencil-slim gown of sand-colored jersey with a draped bodice and peplum front. The broad brown suede belt had an insertion of narrow gold kid in the center. Senora de Espil's turban was of sand-colored felt, covered with rings of the same material forming flowers, and with this she wore brown accessories.

Mrs. Hagner was in chiffon jersey in a rich American Beauty shade, made with long, tight-fitting sleeves and a full skirt. Her hat of natural colored straw was trimmed with two large chrysanthemums. The bride's grandmother, Mrs. Frank Letts, wore sapphire blue chiffon jersey with a belt jeweled in gold and ruby stones.

The young couple could set up a gift shoppe anytime they want, so numerous and handsome are the presents sent them. The gifts were displayed yesterday on the first floor of the embassy, a glittering array of silver, china and furniture. The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull sent a lovely silver cocktail tray, and there were gifts from Mrs. Sumner Welles, the Brazilian Ambassador, and many others in official and diplomatic circles. Mrs. Letts pinned to the silver gravy dish she gave the couple, a note saying "may you always have plenty of gravy."

All official and smart Washington jammed the embassy yesterday for the reception. Yet so large and numerous are the rooms that at no time did it seem crowded. In the ballroom an orchestra played, and here the towering white bride's cake was set up in front of the fireplace. On the marble mantel were enormous clusters of white lilies. White and green was the color scheme of the tea table.

Reflections in a champagne glass: Mrs. Woodrow Wilson chatting with Mrs. Jesse Jones . . . Mrs. Owen J. Roberts in a smart brown ensemble . . . Mrs. John R. Williams, in lavender dress and hat, sitting with friends in the hall.

Another family combination, Mrs. Hiram Bingham with Mrs. Alexander Phillips and Miss Kitty Hill . . . Donna Julia Brambilla's smart sailor swathed in white chiffon . . . Mrs. Sidney Lee and Mrs. Carroll Morgan with new spring bonnets.

Mrs. John Newbold, jr., wearing a fur jacket over her frock . . . Mrs. Henry Roosevelt in black with a flower crowned turban . . . the Under Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, who will have two weddings in their family soon . . . the Mexican Envoy and Senora de Castillo Najera and the Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora de Martins among the diplomats . . . Miss Anne Squire, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. George A. Garrett in a blue ensemble, Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mrs. Peter Gerry, Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, Miss Anne Perrin and dozens more.

When she left for her honeymoon in a shower of rice and rose petals, the bride wore a beige covert cloth suit trimmed with a military belt in red and navy blue. Over this was a military cape, and the costume was topped off with a beige fabric straw sailor with folded edge trimmed with a quill in brown and beige, and a navy blue veil.

On their return the couple will live at 1911 R Street. Their engagement was announced last month and for the last few weeks they have been feted at a round of gay parties.

Douglases Plan Ballet Party

Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas will entertain at dinner on March 28, later taking their guests on to the performance of the National Ballet.

Yesterday afternoon the Washington Ballet Guild entertained more than 70 guests at the home of Mrs. Douglas. Invitations were of an original nature, featuring dainty dolls dressed in ballet costumes, and the decorations on the tea table were of a matching originality.

Instead of the usual floral centerpiece, Mrs. Douglas' tea table was a veritable stage, where a troupe of fluffily dressed ballet dolls danced upon a mirror. Around the edges of the mirror stage, floodlights of daffodils cast their sunny glow upon the dancers.

Mrs. Neville Miller gave a short talk on Washington Ballet and its future to an attentive group of ballet and music minded guests.

Pouring during the afternoon were Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. George Rublee; Mrs. Samuel O. Clark, who has recently returned from a sojourn in Florida; Mrs. Justin Miller, and Mrs. Walter Wyatt.

McKenna, Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mrs. James Slattery, Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, Mrs. Joseph Miller and many more.

Mrs. Casey Holds 'at Home'

"White Oaks," the Australian Legation on Cleveland Avenue, was the scene of an "at home" yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Richard G. Casey, wife of the Minister, entertained.

Mrs. Casey wore a chic Molyneaux frock of black and white print with a short jacket. She received in the pleasant library and guests wandered from there into the reception room. The spacious house was abloom with flowers. Tall vases of Easter lilies vied with delphinium and daffodils for attention. White stock was effectively used with blue sprays of lupins.

Assisting Mrs. Casey during the afternoon were Mrs. Nelson T. Johnson, wife of the newly-appointed Minister to Australia; Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, wife of the Counselor of the Canadian Legation, and Mrs. Alan S. Watt, wife of the First Secretary of the Australian Legation.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

WASHINGTON will be full of out-of-town guests this week-end and until after the opening of the National Gallery of Art on Monday evening; so full, in fact, that most of the Capital's hostesses haven't time to think beyond the magic date. Not so Mrs. George Garrett and Mrs. Arthur Woods, however. Although they will take active part in entertaining the week-end visitors, these two ladies are also working on the cleverest and most original plans for the spring garden tour in Virginia. The tour will benefit Bundles for Britain. Volunteers are being sent out to clock the distances to the various gardens and estates and to discover first-hand the best means of transportation. In some cases it may be rail or even boat, and the volunteers will also inspect and list all available accommodations so as to be primed with the most exact information.

MR. AND MRS. Hallett Johnson have moved into their house on R Street and are gradually gathering together their most treasured possessions, some of which were in Spain and some in Sweden. The furniture from Spain arrived safely and now the good news is that the Johnson's dog, an Airdale much prized in the family, and the rest of their furniture will soon arrive from Sweden. When Mr. Johnson was transferred from his recent post as Consul-General in Stockholm to the State Department in Washington there was no possible way of bringing the dog with him along the circuitous route home which he had to follow. Now, however, arrangements have been made between Sweden and the belligerents for ships to sail direct from Sweden to New York, and the first returning member of the U. S. Legation in Stockholm will bring a refugee Airdale with his luggage.

DRIVING OUT to Virginia the other night to dine with Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, one found the fields glittering white under a full moon and made a mental note that snow is to be enjoyed in the country more than in the streets of town. The Shouses received their guests before a roaring fire in their attractive farmhouse, which they intend to make headquarters till next October. Meantime they have rented their house in Georgetown with no regrets, as they both prefer life in the country.

After a drive to Wolf Trap Farm, appetites are always keen, and Mrs. Shouse provides her guests with the most delicious country dishes. That night the menu included a thick, peasant soup, roast duck and home-raised and cured ham with the green salad. Among those dining with Mr. and Mrs. Shouse were Commander and Mrs. Hamilton Bryan—is Mrs. Bryan turning into one of Washington's most amusing roconteurs, or am I just late in discovering it?—Baron and Baroness Stackelberg, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, and Eric Taff. When someone remarked on a resemblance between Baroness Stackelberg and her recently acquired cousin-in-law, Mrs. Martin Vogel (Peggy Townsend), the pretty baroness admitted that she had been told of the resemblance three times that very day.

THOUGH THE lovely, blonde Chatfield-Taylor sisters will not have a double wedding—Adelaide will be married in early spring and Rose not until June—they will both live in Cambridge, Mass., next winter. Rose's fiance, Fred MacMurray, is studying medicine at Harvard, and Adelaide's future husband, John Marshall Kernochan, who is a musician and composer, will finish a course at Harvard which was interrupted by his musical work. The sisters themselves will not be idle, as Adelaide is talented in sculpture and Rose in drawing.

Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin have joined friends in Florida for a short and much needed vacation. Besides being interested in her husband's work for the Lease-Lend Bill, Mrs. Austin has been working hard for the Picadilly Arcade for the benefit of the R. A. F. Mrs. Austin is in charge of the food table and did a great deal of preparing for it before she went to Florida. Among the delicacies for sale on her table will be plenty of Vermont maple sugar and special breakfast food which is combined with maple sugar and which is a favorite with children.

Mrs. Pack Is Host For Mlle. Alving, Swedish Writer

Mrs. Elizabeth Thorpe Pack, who recently arrived here from Chile, entertained at a dinner party last evening in honor of Mlle. Elizabeth Alving, well-known Swedish war correspondent.

Among the guests were the First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, Don Abelardo Silva; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britten, Mr. and Mrs. Igor Cassini, George Abell and his house guest, Leicester Hemingway.

Mr. Hemingway is the brother of Ernest Hemingway, novelist, and is himself an author of a number of articles. He will spend several days in Washington as the guest of Mr. Abell while gathering material for a motion picture. He will go from here to Los Angeles, where Sir Anthony Jenkinson will work with him on the script. Mr. Hemingway and Sir Anthony are coauthors of "Caribbean Cruise," a series of articles which appeared recently.

Zadeikises Greet President Smetona

The Minister of Lithuania and Mme. Zadeikis are in New York, where they went earlier in the week to greet the President of Lithuania, Antanas Smetona, who arrived from Brazil. After a two weeks stay in New York City President Smetona plans to visit Washington.

A testimonial dinner was given in honor of the President on Thursday in New York by a group of the Lithuanian societies. The Minister and Mme. Zadeikis, who will return to Washington tomorrow, attended the dinner. President Smetona left Lithuania after the occupation by Russia and came to this country via Germany, Switzerland, Portugal and Brazil. His son-in-law and daughter, Col. and Mrs. Aloysius Valusis, preceded him here by several months. They are at present in New York.

D. C. Belles Attend Prom at Princeton

Among the Washington girls at the events were the Misses Suzanne Masten, Mary White, Charlotte J. Burchell, Isabel Badger, Mary A. Baillie, Mary Anne Donnelly, Chloe Ann MacDonald, Jeanne Penman and Mary Ruth Rutledge.

Notes of Society

Official—Residential

The Princess of Thurn and Taxis, whose home is in Budapest, has arrived in Washington for a visit of several days. Yesterday she was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Clarence Hewes.

Donna Julia Brambilla will entertain at a dinner tonight at the 1925 F Street Club, followed by bridge.

Mrs. Deciode de Paula Machado, who has been in New York this winter, sailed yesterday on the Argentina to spend three months in Rio de Janeiro. With her husband she was recently in Washington and they were feted at a large party given by Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould.

She had served as national vice president, and had just completed two years as chairman of the important national rehabilitation committee at the time of her election.

In addition to her auxiliary work, she has been prominent in the federated clubs and civic groups of her community. For five years she served as a member of the County Board of Charities. Descended from ancestors who came to this country with William Penn, she is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

She became a member of the auxiliary in 1924 when she joined Frank Luke Unit in Phoenix, Ariz. Moving to Indiana, she transferred her membership to the Clinton unit and became active in its work. Service in unit, district and department offices gave her a broad background for her present leadership of the national activities.

Mission Pledges Made

MORE THAN A DROP IN THE BUCKET is this drop in the basket. Miss B. L. Jabin, who made 50 cents earn her $15, was the first to place her contribution in the basket held by Miss Mary Terrell, and Miss Effie T. Brodnox, chairman and cochairman, respectively, of the ways and means committee of the Women's Auxiliary to the Women's Guild of the Central Union Mission

The second half of a $2,000 pledge made just a year ago to the John S. Bennett Memorial Building Fund was voted last night by the Woman's Auxiliary to the Woman's Guild of the Central Union Mission, to be paid at once. The action was taken at the auxiliary's monthly meeting at the Y. W. C. A. at which another pledge of $1,000 was made to the fund, to be paid in 30 months.

The auxiliary, of which Miss Marjorie Webster is president, is now one of the largest donors to the fund for the new Bennett wing which soon will be added to the Central Union Mission. The original pledge of $2,000, promised in 30 months, has been paid in one-third of the time. The first $1,000 was paid almost as soon as the pledge was made.

The auxiliary not only has raised money successfully during the last year but has increased its membership by leaps and bounds. By next October it expects to reach its goal of 1,000 members. At every meeting a long list of new members is taken in—on one occasion as many as 200. The only problem presented by its rapid growth is a meeting place, according to the president.

Miss Carrie Williams is chairman of the finance committee and Miss Mary Terrell of the ways and means committee which has been responsible for the various money-making projects successfully conducted.

Reports were made last night on the "talent" project in which 100 members participated. Each was given a 50-cent piece and was to use her ingenuity to add to it. Some of the members invested in ingredients for cake and candy which they made and sold, increasing their "talents." Miss Marjorie Webster, the president, contributed the proceeds from the sale of a litter of Persian kittens. Mrs. Jean Bennett, superintendent of the mission, increased her half dollar to about $6 by the candy-selling plan.

Mrs. Edwin Legg, another member, collected pennies from her friends by the apron-pocket and tape measure plan which is now popular. She made some miniature aprons with pockets in the front, a tape measure in one and the other empty, and asked her guests to measure their waists and contribute pennies corresponding to the number of inches.

Spring Fashion Parade Thrills 3,000 Women

More than 3,000 women saw what Connecticut Avenue shops hold for the spring at the Fashion Promenade in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom yesterday. The keynote was color; the range was as wide as taste. Approval was universal, on basis of the applause.

"We are very proud of this show and the reception it received," commented Leroy H. Thayer, association president, after practically a capacity attendance during the afternoon and night showings.

He said he had moved about through the exhibits and heard nothing but favorable observations. "We think it is one of our most outstanding and we drew the nicest audience," he stated.

Art Brown, WOL announcer, and Ray Morgan, of WINX, described the spring creations as the models, numbering 15, appeared, to promenade through the seated audience. Gene Archer, a barytone, from the N. B. C. studios, sang.

The show featured 25 exhibits of everything the well-dressed woman will wear this season. A considerable portion of the proceeds from the afternoon and evening shows will be devoted to charity, Thayer stated.

Besides Thayer, officers of the association are William F. Oakley, of Forrest Oakley, Inc., first vice president; Arthur W. Tilley, of Walpole Bros., second vice president; Ethel M. Fistere, of the Arthur Murray Dance Studio, secretary, and Corcoran Thom, jr., of the Riggs National Bank, treasurer.

Court to Rule Monday on GHA Records

Faced with what is probably the most delicate issue he has had to decide in the doctors' trial, Justice James M. Proctor yesterday postponed until Monday his ruling on admissability of certain documentary evidence.

The records concern circumstances of a $40,000 grant to Group Health Association by the Home Owners Loan Corporation in 1937 for the purpose of launching the Federal employes' medical care cooperative.

Resuming the arguments which they began on Thursday, defense counsel told Justice Proctor the documents must be presented to the jury to show that the organized doctors shunned professional relations with G. H. A. because they suspected it was set up illegally.

Legality of the association was established by a court decision in July 1938. The alleged conspiracy conducted against G. H. A. by the American Medical Association, District Medical Society and 18 individual defendants covered all of 1937 and all but the last 10 days of 1938, according to the indictment.

Government lawyers, continuing their arguments yesterday against admissability of the General Accounting Office, Congressional and other records subpenaed by the defense, reiterated that the question of legality or illegality has nothing to do with the antitrust case.

2 Marines Fined $100 in Parking Meter Thefts

Two Marine privates were sent to jail last night in lieu of $100 fines after being convicted of stealing $3 from a downtown parking meter.

Judge George D. Neilson ordered Ralph B. Corl, 22, and James W. Allen, 18, to pay the $100 or serve 90 days in jail. He refused to turn the men over to naval authorities.

Policeman J. C. Gibboney, First Precinct, testified he took the men into custody in the 600 block Tenth Street Northwest, early yesterday when he observed them "pounding" on a meter which had been removed from its post.

Before passing sentence, Judge Neilson pointed out the large number of thefts from meters which have occurred here recently and told the men of the "seriousness of your offense."

Janitor's Helper Cleared by Police In Strangling Case

A colored janitor's assistant, who was held by the police for almost a week in connection with the murder of Mrs. Rose Simons Abramowitz, 25, was released yesterday.

Only other development in the strangling mystery was the location of a man from Kansas City, Mrs. Abramowitz's home town, who was said by residents to have visited frequently the apartment house at 1901 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Detectives considered the man a suspect, thinking he was probably a former suitor. When he was located, however, he was 73, hard of hearing and sightless to such a degree that he had to be led from place to place.

The presentation in England in the name of the league will be made by a former national president of the organization, Lady Albert Seward, who as Mary Bogart, of New York, saw service overseas in the first World War.

Glamorous Lynn Fontanne Called Lady Bountiful of Stage

(Editor's note: One of the most glamorous of all the stage actresses of today is Lynn Fontanne. She and her husband, Alfred Lunt, compose the most successful and best known acting team in the United States today. Vesta Kelling gives a personality-profile of Miss Fontanne, the fifth in the series on "The Great Ladies of the Stage."

By Vesta Kelling

New York, March 14.—"Rich Lynnie" is what Alfred Lunt sometimes calls his wife, Lynn Fontanne, because of what he terms her "Lady Bountiful complex"—which makes this great lady of the stage prodigal with her time, money and an enthralled tenderness which notably includes Lunt himself.

To select seven or eight young people for minor parts in their play, Miss Fontanne and Lunt—always seen side by side—will interview as many as 200 novice thespians, painstakingly listening to the same part read over and over until the small hours of the morning, night after night.

Miss Fontanne has coached free of charge many a budding actress. To one youngster with a Hollywood contract in sight she gave $1,200 so that she could have her nose straightened.

When Miss Fontanne's theatrical maid married her chauffeur, she turned over to the pair her own New York apartment for a two-weeks' honeymoon, all expenses paid.

She grieved for months in 1930, Lunt says, when a broker acquaintance lost all in the market and wanted to make him a pensioner—of which she has many, all nameless to the rest of the world.

On opening nights Miss Fontanne, by nature stability itself, extends this benevolence to her husband, who is inevitably sunk in depression before curtain time, convinced that the play is bad, that he is poor in his part and that no one will come to see the show anyway.

Slow-voiced Miss Fontanne has glowing reports relayed from the box office and at regular intervals assures him that they are about to make the hit of their career.

Once Miss Fontanne lost her stepins on the stage—the night "Caprice" opened in Chicago. Not a snicker was heard out front as, without a pause in her lines, she toed the garment under a nearby sofa, but when the scene was ended the audience burst into applause.

Miss Fontanne, English-born daughter of a French type-founder, attributes her steady nerves to her early British environment. She is now sponsoring a Spitfire fighter fund. In the World War, she drove an ambulance in the British Volunteer Corps.

Unlike most stage stars, both the Lunts are from nontheatrical backgrounds, he being the son of a Wisconsin timber man.

In the early 1900s a friend in London led little Lynn to Ellen Terry, who listened to the child recite, took her on tour and gave her a role in "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire" in 1905.

She first came to this country in 1910 to work in "Mr. Preedy and the Countess" and returned in 1917 with Laurette Taylor's company.

Lunt fell down a backstage flight of stairs when, stricken on sight, he bowed to kiss Miss Fontanne's hand the first time they met. That was at the Hudson Theater in 1919 when both were rehearsing for "Maid of Money."

While the courtship gathered momentum, they often sat around gloomy theatrical boarding houses in the narrow canyons off Broadway with a bright young man named Noel Coward, plotting the future. Lynn and Alfred were to wed and costar. All three would do a show together some time, this to be "Design for Living," a hit of 1933.

When not working they spend their time on their estate at Genesee Depot, Wis., which was Lunt's home farm as a boy and where the two have built a Swedish manor house and a swimming pool—another dream come true.

There Miss Fontanne presides in gingham dresses she even wears at New York rehearsals, chews gum, pampers her dachshunds, raises chickens, tends her flower beds and helps her husband with his 4-acre truck garden. Both indulge in cooking fancy dishes (but he is the better cook) and organize folk dances in the village.

Treasury Tests Power to Tax State Securities

The Treasury last night began a "test action" intended ultimately to prove that the Federal Government has constitutional power to tax the income from State and municipal securities.

The step was a formal claim against seven holders of bonds of the Port of New York Authority for Federal income taxes on the interest obtained by them on the bonds.

A Treasury statement pointed out that the Administration has frequently asked Congress to subject future issues of State and local bonds to the Federal income tax, and said:

"Treasury officials feel that the silenceof Congress on the income tax status of obligations of the Port of New York Authority and similar public corporations has left the department no alternative but to proceed in the present case."

Only a Beginning

The action was identified as only the first phase of the campaign. It involves solely the constitutionality of taxing the income from securities of quasi-governmental corporations, such as the Port of New York Authority.

"If the courts," the Treasury said, "agree with the Treasury on this point, they will be faced squarly with the broader constitutional question of the immunity of State and municipal securities from Federal taxation."

Technically, yesterday's action was an effort to collect back taxes, but the Treasury reiterated its policy against taxing existing State and local securities and said it wanted only to tax the income from future issues. If the action instituted succeeds, the Treasury promised to "renew its recommendation to Congress to abate the payment of back taxes, to exempt outstanding issues from taxation, and to begin the taxation of fuutre issues."

Existing State and local governmental securities total $20,000,000,000.

Case Has Precedent

The Port of New York Authority was selected for the test case for historical reasons. By a similar test action a few years ago, the Treasury won from the Supreme Court and Congress the right to tax the salaries of persons employed by State and local governments.

The first step in the test action was to send tax deficiency notices to the seven bondholders—Howard S. Cullman, Alexander J. Shamberg, D. M. Bell, Maurcie Bouvier, Henrietta J. Bouvier, Willis S. Kilmer and Martin S. Paine.

Seville Blast Leaves 50 Dead And 500 Hurt

By the Associated Press

Seville, Spain, March 14.—Fifty persons were killed, more than 500 injured and 3,000 left homeless today by an explosion which destroyed the Santa Barbara powder warehouse, wrecked an entire suburb and blasted out doors and windows even in the center of this ancient city.

The explosion was ascribed to the dropping of a case of explosives by a workman, this blast touching off all the warehouse stores.

The workman, his wife and seven children were killed.

Three hundred workers' homes were destroyed, and the collapse of a marketplace building injured many women.

The great trembling roar shook the earth for miles around. Doors were wrenched from their hinges, store fronts caved in, and windows were cracked in automobiles far from the scene.

The factory, which belonged to the Union Espanola de Explosivos, was said to contain blasting materials for mining and industrial use.

2 Die, 9 Injured In Harrisburg Fire

Harrisburg, Pa., March 14 (AP).—Two persons suffocated and nine were injured early today in a general alarm fire that swept an apartment building and an unoccupied store.

The dead are Carl Fraunfelter, 46, World War veteran and adjutant of the Society of the Twenty-eighth Division, Pennsylvania National Guard, and Mrs. Carrie Schreck, a widow, in whose apartment Fraunfelter boarded. Several were rescued by firemen, two of whom were overcome by smoke.

Manns Hope Fourth Home Will Be Safe

Princeton, N. J., March 14 (AP).—Novelist Thomas Mann is leaving for Santa Monica, Calif., and a new home tomorrow, hoping that personal history will not repeat itself.

A voluntary exile from Germany, the 1929 Nobel Prize winner has been lecturing at Princeton University since coming to America in 1938. But he's glad to give up regular lecturing because it takes too much time from his writing.

He and Mrs. Mann are as gay and excited as a young married couple over the house they are building in Santa Monica with mountains near the back door, the Pacific Ocean at their front yard.

The way the world has gone during their married life is personalized in the fate of three previous homes they've built.

"Our first house," recalls the novelist's wife, "was in the Bavarian hills. And then the world war came and we sold our little home to buy war loans.

"Next was a bigger house in Munich. But the Nazis took it and everything in it.

"Then we had a house in Lithuania. Because it was outside Germany, we felt it would be safe. We lost it and everything in it to the totalitarians.

"Now our fourth house is in California. I wonder what will happen."

Picture Naming Proves Many Have Imagination

Public reaction was ample and articulate yesterday to the invitation to caption a painting which is being window-displayed at The Post.

Scores of suggestions were received on the first day of an informal, prizeless competition to name the picture, which shows three American cowboys looking very stern, indeed.

The idea of Edward Bruce, chief of the section of fine arts, is for the work by Howard Cook to be given a name which will tie it up with the preparedness program, making it a sort of patriotism paster. The picture is on loan from the arts section, a unit of the Federal Works Agency.

Here are some of the initial suggestions:

"Branding Time for Dictators," Phillip Bagan, 2800 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast; "Guardians of Our Heritage," Mrs. Ethel Snow, Emporia, Kans.; "We Are Not Bluffing," A. T. Edwards, El Paso, Tex.; "Slim, They Need Us," Mrs. Mary E. Cunningham, Arlington, Va.; "Come and Get It," Virginia Daingerfield, Alexandria, Va., and "We Stand Firm," Anna Thompson, 422 K Street Northwest.

In the Dumps With the Mumps

One case of mumps had the Seventeenth Field Artillery at Fort Meade in the dumps yesterday.

The sick private was quarantined. He's with Battery G, so it, too, was isolated. So was Battery A, which eats with G. But what to do with Service Battery, which sleeps with A, and Headquarters Battery, which eats with Service. Officials are stumped.

Rare Works To Enrich D. C. Gallery

'Madonna and Child' Of Botticelli Among 43 Paintings on Loan From Samuel Kress

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The National Gallery of Art, which will be dedicated by President Roosevelt Monday night, has been further enriched by important paintings, sculptures, engravings and etchings, it was announced yesterday.

Samuel H. Kress, of New York, a trustee of the National Gallery, who in 1939 donated his outstanding collection of Italian art, has placed on "indefinite loan" at the gallery 43 additional paintings and 22 additional pieces of sculpture.

The paintings include a large "Madonna and Child," by Botticelli, described as one of the Italian master's finest works. It was executed at a time when Botticelli, under the religious fervor of Savonarola, was devoting himself entirely to religious subjects and painting with a new emotional intensity.

Bust of Young St. John

The sculptures include what is described as one of the most beautiful of all fifteenth century creations in stone, the Young St. John the Baptist, by Antonio Rossellino, formerly in the Church of San Francesco del Vanchettoni in Florence. Gallery officials say that the marble bust is probably the greatest work of art allowed to leave Italy permanently in recent years.

There is also a seventeenth century masterpiece of Lorenzo Bernini, the early bronze of his famous portrait of Louis XIV, described as one of the most distinguished examples of Baroque portraiture in this country.

The National Gallery announced that a collection of more than 300 selected engravings, etchings, woodcuts and lithographs, dating from the fifteenth century to the nineteenth century, had been given to the gallery by Miss Ellen T. Bullard and three anonymous donors.

"This valuable contribution to the National Gallery," it was said, "will form a nucleus of the highest standard for a print collection which it is hoped will constantly expand."

26 Etchings of Rembrandt

The donation includes such famous Renaissance engravings as the "Battle of the Nudes" by Antonio Pollaiuolo. In a German section are engravings by Martin Schongauer and one of the most brilliant impressions in existence on Durer's famous print of the "Knight Death and the Devil." Rembrandt, the greatest printmaker of the seventeenth century, is represented by 26 of his etchings which show the range of his power as an illustrator, as a portraitist and as a student of nature.

The two greatest English printmakers, William Blake and Turner, are both represented in the collection: Blake by the seven illustrations for Dante's Inferno, which he engraved himself as well as his 21 illustrations and the title page to the Book of Job; Turner by his Liber Studiorum, the most famous set of landscape prints of the nineteenth century.

The National Gallery, it was further announced yesterday, will be decorated Monday night by a famous collection of acacias—the gift of Joseph E. Widener, of Philadelphia, one of the trustees of the gallery.

Earlier Admission

The National Gallery of Art announced yesterday that guests at the formal dedication Monday night would be admitted an hour earlier—6 p. m. instead of 9 p. m., as stated on the invitation.

The time was moved up so as to relieve congestion and to give guests extra time to view the works of art. President Roosevelt is to speak at 10 p. m. Guests will enter on Constitution Avenue, at Sixth Street. None will be admitted, it was said, except those whose names appear on the cards of admission.

Hearings Spur Federal Pay-Rise Bills

Living Costs Soaring, Committee Told; Ramspeck Promises Early Consideration

Early consideration of the two plans for providing automatic pay rises for Federal employes was promised yesterday by Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee, at the conclusion of public hearings on two bills.

As soon as the hearings are printed, he said, the committee will meet in executive session and try to decide whether to report the Randolph bill, which has the greatest support among Government workers, or the Ramspeck bill, which has the backing of the Budget Bureau.

Rising costs of living in Washington and the need for maintaining morale of Government workers during the defense drive were cited by witnesses in support of their demands for immediate action.

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, read a letter he had received in connection with his rent-control bill as an indication of the upsurge of living costs.

Given Two Weeks' Notice

The writer, a Government employe, stated that his landlord had given him two weeks' notice of a rent hike from $40 to $52.50 a month. The tenant, Randolph said, had occupied the apartment for some time and had always paid his rent on time.

"This is not an isolated case," Randolph said. "It's typical of the general increase in living costs. Some complaints I have received of rent hikes are worse than this one."

Miss Eleanor Nelson, secretary-treasurer of the United Federal Workers of America, stated that living costs had gone up 5 per cent and are still rising.

"We feel that establishment of a good morale is essential to national defense," she said. "The cost, moreover, is small in relation to the billions being appropriated for defense."

Criticizes Rating System

Miss Nelson criticized the efficiency rating system proposed in the Ramspeck bill and another section which would enable the head of a department to refuse a pay rise to an employe unless "all other factors are satisfactory."

She pointed out, moreover, that the rises would come only every 18 months under the Ramspeck bill and every year under the Randolph plan.

Other witnesses included George E. Tolman, of the Immigration and Naturalization Officers Association; Milton Fischer, of the Institute of Federal Architects, Chemists, and Engineers; Craig Vincent, secretary of the Washington Industrial Union Council, and Edgar G. Brown, of the United Government Employes.

Expert Finds Faults in D.C. Welfare

Hopkirk Says Capital Needs Twice as Many Case Workers to Focus on Children

Twice as many case workers are needed for Washington's child-caring agencies and institutions to permit focusing on the child's behavior while under care, Howard W. Hopkirk of New York, executive director, Child Welfare League of America, said yesterday after a meeting with representatives of 14 such bodies.

"We're disappointed that there has not been greater development of boarding home care in Washington," he said. "More money—for additional social workers and for the boarding of children—is needed before this development can take place."

He commented favorably on the expansion of case-work service here since a Child Welfare League representative made a study and recommndations on the situation in 1937. He pointed out that this case-work expansion has dealt largely with the intake and discharge of children, and means more service with the families.

The meeting for representatives of agencies and institutions to report on progress since the 1937 study was held at the home of Mrs. Eugene Meyer, chairman of the Washington committee of the Child Welfare League of America.

The representatives agreed to request Mrs. Myrtle L. Duckworth, of St. Louis, who made the former study, to return to Washington next fall to confer with them and to check up on progress.

Of the groups represented yesterday, all but two now have case-work service, it was reported at the meeting. Four of them have added this service since the 1937 study. Episcopal Home, St. Ann's Infant Asylum and St. Rose's Technical School, which are Community Chest agencies, were enabled to put in case workers through cooperation of the Chest. The fourth is Hillcrest Children's Village.

In addition to those institutions, representatives of the following attended the meeting: Washington Home for Foundlings, St. John's Orphanage, St. Joseph's Home and School, St. Vincent's Home and School, Catholic Charities, Jewish Social Service Agency, Swartzell Methodist Home, Baptist Home, Florence Crittenton Home and the Children's Protective Association.

C. F. R. Ogilby and Lucien H. Mercier were named executors. The will was dated December 1, 1938.

Kansas City Yields No Clew In Bride Slaying

A Washington detective's investigation in Kansas City, Mo., former home town of Mrs. Rose Simons Abramowitz, has failed to uncover any clews in the attack-slaying here of the 29-year-old bride of four weeks, police announced last night.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, said his men were pressing an investigation in the week-old murder, although they admittedly had few leads to work on.

A colored janitor's assistant questioned and held for a week, was released yesterday.

Lieut. Aubrey Tolson was reported to have contacted all friends of Mrs. Abramowitz in Kansas City on the theory that a former suitor may have been the killer. But he had little success in that direction.

Mrs. Abramowitz was buried in Kansas City beside the grave of her father.

Two parents in the ceramics class for adults at the Bethesda-Chevy Chase (Md.) High School are modeling busts of their youngsters.

Mrs. Blanche Jorgensen, of 4521 Ridge Street, Chevy Chase, is making a bust of her 3-year-old son, Dick, and Richard Johnson, of 212 East Underwood Street, Chevy Chase, is modeling the head of his 5-year-old daughter, Becky.

Biggest job is keeping the youngsters still, particularly in class where there are so many more interesting things for children to do than just posing. Most of the work has to be done at home in spare moments.

There are about 15 adults enrolled in the class, which meets every Thursday night at 7:30 under direction of Mrs. Guy Veal, 415 Raymond Street, Chevy Chase, former art teacher at Antioch College and prior to that an instructor in modeling and sculpturing at the University of Iowa and the University of Colorado.

Oldest member of the class is Mrs. Nellie B. Vinton, 67, of 3418 Porter Street Northwest, who is studying clay modeling so she can teach at her son's summer cmap in Maine. She is specializing in modeling jewelry and pottery.

The ceramics class is one of a number of night classes for adults sponsored by the Montgomery County Board of Education. William Feddeman has charge of the adult education program.

Rep. Dirksen To Offer New D. C. Formula

Plan Would Set Up Board of Experts To Determine Value Of Federal Holdings

By James D. Secrest

A substitute for the Overton-Hunter formula to fix the Federal payment to the District is being drafted by Representative Dirksen (Republican) of Illinois, and will be introduced Monday, it was learned yesterday.

Dirksen's plan proposes the creation of a board of Treasury experts who would determine a fair value of Federal land and buildings within the National Capital each year and report their findings to Congress.

The ranking minority member of the fiscal affairs subcommittee of the House District Committee, Dirksen has expressed his opposition to the Overton-Hunter formula, which is based on the ratio of Federal-owned land in the Capital to the total District acreage.

To Be Used as Yardstick

Dirksen's bill does not suggest or direct Congress to apply the District's $1.75 real estate tax to the valuation of Federal property. The annual report would be made only "for the information of Congress."

While Dirksen was out of the city yesterday, it was understood that his intention is that the valuation be used as a yardstick for the determination of the annual Federal payment by the House Appropriations Committee.

The measure authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to appoint three members of his staff to the board. The appointees would be paid no additional compensation.

The board would confer with the District tax assessor and give consideration to his assessment of Federal holdings, but it would include no District representative.

$668,071,457 Valuation

Latest figures on Federal assessment as carried on the District books shows a valuation of $668,071,457, divided almost equally between land and improvements. This figure does not include streets and alleys, of which the land titles are held by the Federal Government.

Were the District's $1.75 tax rate applied to this assessed valuation, it would produce an annual Federal payment of approximately $12,000,000, double the present amount.

Senator Overton has considered property valuation as a basis for fixing the United States payment, but he rejected it in favor of his land-ratio formula on the ground that property valuation is subject to too much controversy.

Star Guard in 1923

Born in Syria, Mr. Jawish came to this country as a small boy. In 1923-25 he was the star guard on one of the greatest football teams in Georgetown University's history. His teammates included Jack Hagerty, now coach at the Hilltop; Zube Sullivan, Bob Gormley, Claude Grigsby, "Babe" Connaughton and George Murtagh, Lou Little was the coach.

Salvation Army Wins Zoning Board Appeal

The Salvation Army will be permitted to erect a $27,000 branch headquarters at 1211-1213 G Street Southeast, it was announced yesterday by the Board of Zoning Adjustment.

The board set aside Building Inspector Robert H. Davis' ruling that the proposed structure "is not a church within the meaning of the zoning regulations," and granted the permit unanimously despite protests of several property owners. The area, a residential district, is open to churches.

The board approved four appeals, turned down three and deferred action on two. Those approved follow:

Potomac Electric Power Co. to erect a substation at 1260 Union Street Southwest; American Chemical Society, on behalf of the American Potash Institute, to establish an educational institution at 1155 Sixteenth Street Northwest; Edward D. Spaulding to permit remodeling of a garage at 3342 Dent Place Northwest, and the appeal of Dr. and Mrs. Leon Ransom to erect a one-story front and side addition at 1512 Girard Street Northeast.

Rader to permit erection of a one-story rear porch at 31 McDonald Place Northeast; Mrs. E. H. G. Slater, on behalf of National Lumber Manufacturers Association, for permission to establish an educational institution at 1319 Eighteenth Street Northwest.

Two Bandits Send Boy Up on Elevator, Make Off With $85

George Powell, 17, of 928 T Street Northwest, drug store messenger, reported two colored men robbed him at gun-point in the lobby of an apartment house, 2651 Sixteenth Street Northwest, as he attempted to make a delivery. The bandits then forced him into an elevator, pressed a button sending him up six floors, and escaped.

Donald Centanni, 80, of 1514 Monroe Street Northwest, lost $5 to a colored pair who forced him into an alley in the 2500 block of Georgia Avenue and beat him over the head. He was treated for scalp lacerations at Garfield Hospital.

Alice Deal Junior High School officials told police $70 was stolen from the institution by a thief who broke in through a ground floor window and ransacked offices, the gymnasium and cafeteria and classrooms.

Film Reveals Colorful Tale Of Guatemala

The story of modern Guatemala is the tale of colorful daily life among the republic's Indian population, whose handicraft civilization compares with that of medieval Europe, according to Branson De Cou, who talked last night to members of the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall.

Illustrating with natural color motion pictures the description of his travels through the Guatemalan highlands, De Cou pointed out that the town market is the social center of Indian life there. He said that 85 per cent of the people in Guatemala are pure-blooded Indians, probably descended from the Mayans. They make pottery and bright fabrics ablaze with color and carry heavy loads on their heads just as they have for centuries.

D. C. Boy Breaks Haverford College Scholastic Record

Ellsworth C. Alvord, jr., 17, of Washington, has won the highest scholastic rating ever given a freshman at Haverford College, it was reported here yesterday. His average for the first semester was 97.4.

ALVORD, JR.

Ellsworth is a graduate of St. Alban's School, where he was managing editor of the school paper, a member of the wrestling team, and first scholar in his class.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth C. Alvord, 3512 Lowell Street Northwest. Mr. Alvord is an attorney with offices in the Munsey Building.

Symphony Drive Offices Moved

Headquarters of the National Symphony Orchestra's drive to raise $107,600 for its 1941-42 season will be moved tomorrow to the orchestra's business office in the Woodward Building from the present location in the Carlton Hotel.

At the time of closing the Carlton Hotel headquarters at noon yesterday, $99,294 had been raised, leaving a deficit of $8,306 which must be made good before plans for next season can be announced. More than 100 volunteer workers are still canvassing Washington and vicinity under direction of A. F. E. Horn, vice chairman of the drive.

P. U. C.'s Most Faithful Fan Is Engineer From Philippines

Pedro S. Talavera traveled 10,000 miles from the Philippines to study the District's Public Utilities Commission and since his arrival last September he hasn't missed a day at the office or a single hearing before the commission.

He is an electrical engineer with the public service commission in Manila and was awarded a one-year scholarship by the Commonwealth Government to specialize in public utilities.

Naturally, he said, he is very fond of this country and particularly with the Nation's Capital since the "fame of the commission here has traveled all the way over to the other side of the world."

His biggest thrill, aside from learning of our local utilities, was the recent snowstorm. He wandered about in the snow for several hours and "loved every minute of it."

Mild mannered, the 37-year-old engineer is married and has two daughters. The family is in Manila but he intends to call home on May 21 when his daughter, Maria, will be celebrating her fifth birthday. His other daughter, Mercedes, is 3. The call will cost $19.50 for 3 minutes.

In addition to regulating such utilities as electric, gas, transit and telephone companies the Philippines commission also regulates all water plants, with the exception of the Manila plant and all ice manufacturing plants.

Bus fares in Manila, depending on the zone (similar to our cab zones) vary in price from 1½ to 4 cents. Unlike the District, the Manila cabs have meters.

"We have no citizens' associations in Manila but we do have a public hearing there about every day," Pedro said.

"I have been very much impressed with the associations here and their work to obtain improvements," he added.

38 A.F.L. Workers In Store Strike

Thirty-eight American Federation of Labor employes of Lansburgh & Co. department store walked out on their jobs yesterday. The workers, porters, freight elevator operators, and maids are seeking higher wages, vacations with pay, and closed shop contracts.

James Kimbro, president of the A. F. L. bargaining unit, Local 82, Building Service Employes Unit, said they want substantial pay boosts over the $18 per week which he said is paid at the merchandise firm at present.

The strike faction, management and Labor Department representatives will confer today in an attempt to reach a strike settlement, it was reported.

Austin S. Donaldson, manager of Lansburgh & Co., refused to comment on the dispute.

National Catholic Community Service Gets Pledge of Support

Catholic social service organizations throughout the country have pledged full support to the National Catholic Community Service. The pledge is contained in a resolution adopted by the committee on national defense of the National Conference of Catholic Charities made public here yesterday following a series of meetings held at the headquarters of the National Catholic Welfare Conference here, and attended by representatives of leading Catholic social service groups.

The N. C. C. S. was created by the Catholic bishops of the United States to coordinate the religious, welfare and recreational work among men and women now serving in the armed forces and in the various other activities of the national defense program.

Declaring that the N. C. C. S. "faces some of the most serious problems in the entire history of the Catholic Church in this country," the resolution points out that "each and every Catholic organization must give its best to meeting these problems. The removal of more than a million young men from their own homes to camps and naval bases makes necessary such a service program, and the crowding of large numbers of workers in defense industries centers has brought changes in our lives that challenge every citizen."

Conference discussions revealed that diocesan Catholic welfare organizations, through the promotion of local projects, have already rendered considerable service to the N. C. C. S. in setting up programs at military camps, naval stations, industrial centers and leave areas as well as providing family and child welfare services.

Nats, Aided by 3 Homers, Beat Cards, 6 to 3

Wild Rookies Give 4 Hits, But Walk 16

Masterson and Dean Impressive; Travis, Archie and Case Slam for Circuit

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 14.—Out of a weird performance that saw three young Washington pitchers walk sixteen (SIXTEEN) (16) Cardinals and hit another one in the back the Nats somehow extracted a 6-2 victory today and ended a two-game slump.

When the Cardinals lost their patience and did swing their bats, they had little success, however; they were held to four hits by Walter Masterson, Sam Cunningham and Jim (Dopey) Dean, who divided the Washington pitching. Masterson and Dean were impressive despite their wildness, but Cunningham, who threatened to walk everybody in the park at one point, pitched himself out of the esteem of Manager Bucky Harris.

The Nats flashed power today. Three Washington home runs, all with the bases empty, proved the margin of victory. The game was notable in that it produced First Baseman George Archie's first hit of the season. When Archie did finally unload his maiden hit it was no wild blow. It was a well-powered homer over the leftfield wall. On his next turn at bat, Archie made a second hit that was the opposite extreme—a well-placed bunt down the third base line so perfect it drew no throw.

Two Other Homers

George Case and Cecil Travis also unloaded homers against the Cardinal pitching. Travis belted a fourth-inning line drive far over the rightfield wall. Ten hits the Nats produced today, but the most important was Ben Chapman's third-inning single against Lon Warneke that fetched home the first two runs of the ball game.

Midway in the game, the left-handed Cunningham threatened to lose the Nats' lead and the ball game with three innings of horrible hurling. He allowed only two hits and gave up only two runs, but he walked nine batters. After he had walked three hitters in a row in the sixth, and had pitched two balls to the next batter, he was lifted in favor of Dean, who finished the job of walking the run across the plate, but then got out of the inning gracefully.

Both Dean and Masterson turned in jobs that were pleasing to Harris despite their tendency toward wildness. Masterson gave up neither a hit or a run in the first three innings despite the four walks he issued. He was showing Harris a side-arm curve ball for the first time and it was unhittable.

Dean's Stock Rises

It was Dean, however, who emerged from the affair with the greatest gain in stature on the Nats' staff. The tall, grinning right-hander struck out four Cardinals in his 3 1-3-inning turn and showed poise in stopping the Cardinals' rally against Cunningham in the sixth. He walked two batters and hit a third in the seventh to fill the bases, but fanned Lake for the third out. The only hit he allowed was a scratch affair by Gillenwater in the ninth inning.

Masterson set a run in motion for the Nats when he beat out a scratch hit to Warneke in the third inning. After Case walked, Welaj sacrificed and Chapman got two runs home with a well-tagged single to center. In the fourth Archie's homer against Rookie John Pintar, late of Dallas, upped the Nats' lead to 3-0.

After the Cardinals came up with two runs against Cunningham in the fourth, Travis' homer boosted the Nats' lead to 4-2 in the sixth. In the seventh, Case collected his homer.

Young Al Evans, who is making a game bid for the No. 1 catching job, threw out the only two runners who attempted to steal today . . . Both times with perfect throws . . . Ben Chapman's misplay of Mesner's single to leftfield figured in two Cardinal runs in the fourth . . . Buddy Lewis came up with a hot shot off Triplett's bat to start a lightning double play in the third for Masterson at a time when the bases were full . . . Tonight the Nats returned to Orlando where tomorrow they meet the Reds.

Eagles Beat Orioles in Crucial Game, 3-2

Washington Goalie Has Plenty of Protection Here

MacBeth Is Hero Of Victory; Scores On Weird Shot To Clinch Game

By Jack Munhall

On the strength of a late luck-anointed goal by one of the weakest scorers on the team, the Washington Eagles last night hopped into the driver's seat in the race for the Eastern Amateur Hockey League title by beating the defending champion Baltimore Orioles, 3-2, at Riverside Stadium.

Blond Jack MacBeth, a reliable play maker but seldom a goal scorer, sent Washington into an impressive three-point lead over the Orioles and 4,663 paying patrons into paroxysms of joy at 8:36 of the final period with the counter that decided a thriller.

The second largest crowd in local ice hockey history watched MacBeth knock the puck in from a seemingly impossible angle in the extreme reaches of a corner as Goalie Frank Ceryance made an assist that never will find rest in the record books.

Ceryance, who, like Goalie Gordon Hemming, of Washington, played a superlative game, had the unfortunate luck of kicking the disc into the nets in his efforts to clear it and thus the Eagles won one of the hardest fought matches of their 1941 drive to a first league flag.

For the remainder of the sizzling final period the Eagles rested on the defensive, and mainly by dint of one of Len Burrage's greatest performances, succeeded in turning back most enemy drives before they even penetrated the Washington defensive zone.

By the victory Washington vaulted into the most advantageous position it had yet enjoyed in its ding-dong battle with the Orioles for the championships. The Orioles now have five matches to play while the Eagles have seven, and if Washington wins only four of its remaining matches it will win the crown, regardless of what the Orioles accomplish.

Orioles Score First

The Orioles scored first, at 4:16, when Phil Wychnenka reached a loose puck ahead of several pursuers deep in the Washington defensive zone, unwound a sizzling shot which was followed up successfully by Ripley.

Retaliating about one minute later the Eagles deadlocked the count on a screened shot by Burrage off a fine pass by Roy McBride, one of Washington's most improved players. McBride took the puck from Rossignol at the blue line, skated toward the nets, but when blocked, backhanded the puck to Burrage, who raced in from the defensive zone line to whack a goal through the legs of several players of each team.

The pace accelerated in the second period but so tight was the defense of both teams that each was able to tally only once and both scores came when the victimized team was outnumbered due to penalties. So, going into the final period they were tied again, 2-2.

Oriole Carried From Ice

Just as in the first period, the Orioles were the first to tally in this stanza. Baltimore grabbed the lead while Walter Scherer was in the penalty box for checking Ned Vitarelli into the boards and jarring the little Oriole wingman so badly that he was carried from the ice. And, as in the opening session, it

Snead, Wilford Reach Pro-Amateur Finals

Walper, of D. C., and Paired With Chapman, Defeated by 3 and 2

By the Associated Press

St. Augustine, Fla., March 14.—Sluggin' Sammy Snead, of Hot Springs, Va., and Wilford Wehrle, of Chicago, were as hot as the weather was cold today to lead the way into the semifinals of the seventh annual national pro-amateur best-ball match play tournament.

Victor Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., and Arnold Minkley, of Chicago, will meet Snead and Wehrle in the first match of tomorrow's 36-hole semifinals.

Superb Golf

Snead and Wehrle ignored the raw north winds to play superb golf in disposing of Al Brosch, of Beth Page, N. Y., and Harold Butler, of Hempstead, N. Y., 4 and 3, in the morning round. They took defending champion Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., and his amateur cohort, Charles Sheldon, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., 3 and 2, in the afternoon. The clubhouse thermometer stood at 47 when they started and was back down to the same figure when they finished without having gone much higher.

Snead and Wehrle were at their best in the afternoon match in disposing of Smith, whose putts were beauties. The match was all square at the turn after Smith and Sheldon twice had led one up.

Snead Bags Par

Smith had an impossible shot from a trap on No. 10 and Snead won with an easy par four. He birdied the next hole to go two up. Sheldon gave Smith a lift by winning the twelfth with a birdie three on a 15-foot putt, but on No. 15, a 555-yard par five stretch, Wehrle put on the clincher with a 45-foot putt for a birdie four.

Smith and Sheldon had to go an extra hole in defeating Johnny Farrell, of Hollywood, Fla., and Victor George, of Glenview, Ill., in the morning round.

S. Methodist Gives Coach Bell Longer Contract

By the Associated Press

James H. Stewart, athletic director, said a clause prevented Bell from entertaining offers from other schools or teams. At the end of the contract, Bell may retire from coaching and take up other duties in physical education at the same salary. Salary terms were not disclosed.

Meade Appointed Lacrosse Coach

Bethlehem, Pa., March 14 (AP).—James Meade, a halfback on the Washington Redskins professional football team, today was appointed lacrosse coach at Lehigh University, succeeding Ted Stanwick, who resigned a month ago when called into active Navy service.

The local board, acting as agents for Rizzuto's home board in New York City, will receive the medical report on the little shortstop about a week after the examination and then forward the full file on him to New York.

Riggs, Given Battle, Wins In Four Sets

By the Associated Press

Oklahoma City, March 14.—Defending Champion Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, encountered his first real opposition in the Men's National Indoor Tennis Tournament today, using four sets to defeat Frank Guernsey, of Houston, 6—4, 2—6, 6—3, 6—1, in the singles quarter finals.

Guernsey, two-time national intercollegiate champion and the tournament's eighth-seeded player, made his chief threat in the second set when he won the first four games and coasted through the remaining four with both players holding service.

For a time, it looked as if Guernsey might beat Riggs at his own game—sticking strictly to the defense and letting his opponent make the mistakes—but Riggs stopped making mistakes after the second set.

Riggs was joined in the semi-finals by Second-Seeded Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, who scored a straight-set victory over Frank McElwee, Arkansas champion from the State University at Fayetteville, 6—4, 6—2, 6—3.

Frank Kovacs of Oakland, Calif., shelved his clowning for once and cracked out all his Sunday shots to nudge young Talbert of Cincinnati University, 4—6, 6—4, 10—8, 3—6, 6—3.

Steve Belloise Is Knocked Out By Mauriello

By the Associated Press

New York, March 14.—Tami Mauriello, who was rated the brightest young prospect in the middleweight division until he was beaten by Billy Soose, regained that rating tonight when he knocked out Steve Belloise in 2:58 of the first round of their "battle of the Bronx" at Madison Square Garden.

The crowd of about 14,000 which had come to make noise about the neighborhood brawl, hardly had started yelling when Tami slipped over the first right to the jaw and floored Belloise for a nine count. Steve, a strong favorite, didn't seem badly hurt that time, but when Mauriello repeated on his next rush across the ring, he tried to hang on.

That didn't work either. Mauriello came tearing across the ring with his right hand cocked, caught Steve in his own corner, and after a brief flurry sent him down for a third count of nine. He was barely able to get up at the count of nine and was staring, almost helpless along the ropes, when Tami rushed at him with his right lifted, slammed it against Steve's jaw and turned away. Belloise slid backwards through the ropes and was unable to pull himself to his feet.

Tom Harmon Signs $15,000 Contract For 'Own' Picture

By the Associated Press

New York, March 14.—Tom Harmon, All-America halfback from the University of Michigan, signed a $15,000 contract tonight to star in a single picture for Columbia pictures—"Harmon of Michigan."

Harmon said he still was looking forward to a radio sports broadcasting career and would not play professional football.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 14.—This is anniversary week in the Nats' training camp, but Clark Griffith will thank you not to remind him of that fact. Because it was exactly three years ago on a mid-March morning that the Washington club owner decided on a move that was not quite bright. He traded First Baseman Joe Kuhel to the White Sox for Zeke Bonura.

POVICH

The Nats haven't had a first baseman since. Bucky Harris has sent a lot of people out to play the bag but there wasn't a first baseman in the lot, including Bonura. The trade that sent Kuhel to Chicago ushered in three years of pain for Manager Harris, and to Harris the first base job is still something of a jumping toothache. It needs filling, badly.

Griffith and Harris never had any delusions about Bonura's brilliance around the bag; they simply didn't believe that he was as horrible as he proved to be. But Zeke opened their eyes. He had a weakness on balls hit to his right, and another weakness on balls hit to his left. When Zeke was off with the crack of the bat it was, too often, in the wrong direction.

It was slightly sickening to Griffith and Harris to watch Joe Kuhel, meanwhile, giving the White Sox the fancy Dan protection around first base that the Nats had always enjoyed when he was on the Washington payroll. They had traded the slickest fielding first baseman in the league for the worst. Griffith's reputation as a trader nose-dived.

First base has been a problem on the Washington club ever since that ill-starred Kuhel-Bonura trade. At various times, Harris was driven to giving Ossie Bluege, Sammy West and Jimmy Bloodworth first baseman's mitts and telling them to play the bag, in desperation. A wet-eared young rookie from Charlotte by the name of Pellard, or something, got a shot at the job for a couple of months. So did Mickey Vernon and Jack Sanford, but at the end of last season the Nats still did not consider themselves in possession of a first baseman.

But suddenly last October, Mr. Griffith swelled up with the importance of an announcement he wanted to make. He had bought a first baseman for the Nats. His name was George Archie, and he had just been awarded the most valuable player award in the Pacific Coast League. He had led the pennant-winning Seattle Club in hitting with a .324 average, and he would look mighty nice in that Washington infield.

The lone disturbing item at the time was that the Nats had acquired Archie by way of the draft. Apparently for all his talents no major league club had deemed it worth while to step in before the end of the season and buy him for anything more than the $7,500 he would bring on the draft list. There was no scramble to acquire Archie despite his Coast League exploits, apparently.

Well, it seems now that Archie isn't looking so mighty nice in that Washington infield. In fact, the Nats' bosses are beginning to wonder by what magic he ever won the most valuable player award in the Coast League. In the Nats first three exhibition games, he hasn't collected anything remotely resembling a hit and, more important, he hasn't looked as if he ever will get that maiden hit. The Nats would have had more fun dumping their $7,500 down the handiest manhole, piece by piece.

Consequently, the first base job on the Nats is still as wide open as the editor's waste basket. In desperation, Harris has called in Mickey Vernon to take over the job which Archie seems to have muffed. Last season Vernon was dismissed as entirely inadequate, and the only other first baseman in camp, Jack Sanford, couldn't buy a hit against big league pitching last season.

Not only is first base, as it now stands, an eyesore to Harris and Griffith, but grief has been piling up in another direction—the pitching. The other day, three of Harris' pitching staff were getting their ears pinned back for 15 hits by the New York Giants and the Nats' manager had his hands to his ears to soften the blows. Meanwhile, on the same afternoon at Havana, the Cuban pitcher Gilberto Torres was pitching nine full innings against the red-hot Brooklyn Dodgers and holding them to five hits. The irony is that Torres is the property of the Washington Club, and the Nats' board of strategy had not even bothered to call him to camp for a tryout.

Washington, D. C.

Dear Boss:

I don't know whether Horatio Alger wrote a book titled "From Jerk to Journalism," but it looked as though I'm headed that way the other day. It was like this, Boss. I put myself in second gear to climb the hill between Pennsylvania Avenue and F on Fourteenth Street, as I generally do. Near the top of the incline, I dropped myself back into first, as I generally do. Then I met Harvey Jacob, as I generally do, and he invited me up to the National Press Club, as he generally does. I accepted the invitation, as I sometimes do.

HAIGHT

Now, Boss, I don't know why it is, but when we race-track press-box guys like a fellow we believe it is our duty to give him a tip on a horse. Almost invariably we get caught in the backwash of good intentions and more often than enough we are sorry a minute after the horse's name leaves our lips.

It was only natural that when we were in the elevator I should lean toward Harvey and say, "I believe Bats' Breath is a good thing at Tropical today." As usual, I would have liked to have inhaled those words almost as soon as I had spoken. But, then, Harvey wasn't much of a horse player, I thought, and probably would forget the horse, at least until he happened to be looking over the race charts the next day.

Although I haven't been in the habit of doing it lately, pardon me if I try to make a long story short by saying that Friend Jacob introduced me and my horse to every living soul on the thirteenth floor. "I want you to meet Walter Haight who covers racing for The Washington Post and he has a tip today on Bats' Breath," was Harvey's stock line.

White House writers, Capitol reporters, Government officials, foreign correspondents, club employes . . . In the closing stages of our tour, the tip actually was outmaneuvering us. It got to the point where members were pointing to me and saying, "I know, you're Walter Haight, of The Post and you have a tip on Bats' Breath."

We passed the chef's Icebox and I could have sworn a side of beef peeped out the door and mumbled, "Hey, Haight, how about getting me down on that Bats' Breath for a couple of pork chops?"

Boss, I was on the international spot.

I sneaked a look at Harvey's wrist watch and it was 4:15 o'clock. That Bats' Breath race was due to be off in 15 minutes. Of course, I wanted to get away from that Press Club before the race was run.

I thought of an appointment I had at 3 o'clock. I skidded down Fourteenth Street hill without even snubbing my brakes and wobbled to a stop in front of the teletype machine in The Post's wire room.

Over the wire came the "Fifth Tropical off at 4:32."

Well, boss, during the minute and some 12 seconds that it took to run that race I was the most energetic rooter you ever saw. I threw my hands in front of me, jockey fashion, and in my imagination I rode Bats' Breath every inch of that six furlongs, although I was staring at a blank piece of paper and a machine as motionless as a tombstone.

Finally the teletype clicked into action. My bulging eyes watched it spell out "B-A-T-S'——"

That was enough for me, Boss. I let out a "Wow!" so loud you'd have thought they had just fastened the last bolt on the Queen Mary. I jumped all over the room.

Telegraph Operator Pete Marshall stopped receiving, pounded down in the sending key in the manner men of his profession who are thoroughly disgusted, sent a stream of tobacco juice into gabboon and hallowed, "What's the matter with you. Are you crazy?"

All I could do was dance around shouting, "Bats' Breath got home! He did it!"

I felt a tap on my shoulder, and heard our mild-voiced copyboy ask quietly, "Did you play him?"

I came to a complete stop and repeated that question to myself.

Come to think of it, Boss, I didn't have a nickel on that damn nag.

The teletype began to click again. I watched as it banged out "$3.20 to win, $2.40 to place and $2.20 to show."

As I went back to the sports department to go to work, I muttered to myself, "I wish I were as lucky as those journalist guys."

JERK HAIGHT.

Hank Greenberg's Flat Feet Turned Down by Uncle Sam, But Detroit Tigers Will Pay $50,000 for Use of Them

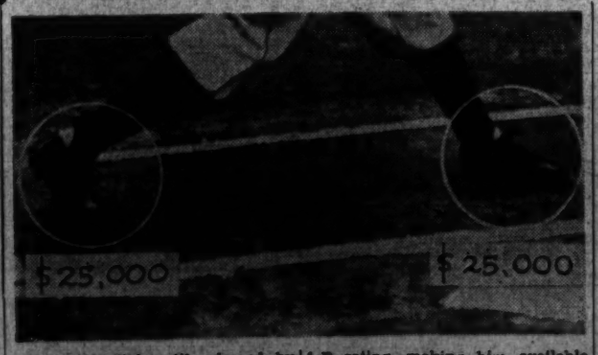
By the Associated Press

Detroit, March 14.—The flat feet that have carried big Henry Greenberg to great baseball honors and to a 1941 playing contract reported to call for $50,000 produced a difficult question tonight for his draft board here.

GREENBERG

The Detroit Tiger outfielder and home-run hitter now is training with the ball club at Lakeland, Fla., where he was examined recently by a physician at the behest of the draft board.

Board officials here said today they had not received the medical report, and Dr. Grover C. Freeman, of Lakeland, said the report was confidential until released by the board, but——



Two Detroit newspapers reported the physician had recommended that Greenberg be given a class 1-B rating, making him available only for limited Army service, because of the flat feet.

Greenberg at Lakeland said if that is so "it is a great surprise to me," and added that he was "ready to go into service at any time I am called."

Ben O. Shepherd, chairman of draft board No. 23, said it was his offhand opinion that the board would have to follow the medical examiner's findings unless it was decided to send Greenberg before a medical advisory board. The advisory board for Greenberg's district is the staff of Henry Ford Hospital here.

The $50,000 salary figure reported to have been placed on Greenberg's 1941 contract would make him the highest paid player in Detroit Baseball Club history.

The Detroit News said Greenberg signed his contract last night at Lakeland following a long conversation by telephone with Club Owner Walter O. Briggs, who is at Miami Beach.

Roosevelt Battles for Southern Title at Durham Tonight

Riders Beat Lafayette Five, 33-16

Washington Quintet To Meet Greenville For Championship; Bethesdans Bow

By Bill Burnett
Post Staff Writer

Durham, N. C., March 14.—Roosevelt High's smart band of basketers from Washington, D. C., installed themselves an odds-on favorite to take the title in the third annual Southern Scholastic Basketball Tournament here today, taking two decisive victories to earn a finals berth tomorrow night against Senior High Five, of Greenville, S. C.

This morning the Doughty Rough Riders, beaten out in the first round of last year's tournament, got off to a flying start and smashed Boys High of Atlanta, Ga., 33-20, and in tonight's semifinal double-header the public school champions of the Nation's Capital scored an even more impressive 33-16 victory over Lafayette High, of Lexington, Ky.

Bethesda Beaten

Metropolitan Washington's other contender, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, for the second straight year was knocked out despite a courageous stand in the first round this morning, 34-28, by the same Lexington club which Roosevelt roared over tonight.

If there was ever any question of Roosevelt's confidence in itself, perhaps caused by a recent beating by Gonzaga in Washington's Metropolitan tournament, the Rough Riders dispelled it as they romped into the finals. They were never headed after Hymie Perlo, their smooth-working captain, "potted" one from the center of the court with scant seconds of the game elapsed.

Just a Breeze

At the end of the first quarter they were out front, 9-2, and from there in it was a breeze. Leads of 17-4 and 30-10 were boasted by the ruthless Riders at the windup of the next two stanzas and the second team played most of the last period.

Roosevelt hardly could be classed as "hot," considering the perfect plays it executed, but its chances were aided no end by the fact Lexington missed most everything it tossed up, from under the basket and far out. The height that spelled doom for Bethesda's hopes this morning failed to worry a Roosevelt club that appeared to have made the trip for one purpose—to bring back the title.

Robertson Stars

Perlo did much of the feeding to him, but it was Tommy Robertson, probably the most improved man on the club, who rammed home the dazzling succession of snowbirds that staked Roosevelt to most of its lead. Robertson, stealing the show from high-scoring Frankie Ciango and Perlo, accounted for 13 points, to lead the scoring of both teams. Ciango got only three counters, Perlo got seven, and Charley Howard, another point threat, went scoreless as well as to the bench on fouls early in the third period.

Brewers Engage Celtics Tomorrow At Riverside

The Washington Brewers will face Kate Smith's Celtics at Riverside Stadium tomorrow night at 8:45 o'clock.

A victory over the league leaders would keep the Brewers well in the thick of the fight, while a defeat would go far toward eliminating them from title consideration.

The Brewers have consecutively upset the Philadelphia Sphas and New York Jewels at Riverside and are conceded a good chance of turning back the Celtics, their nemesis. Petey Barenson, recently purchased outright from the Kate Smiths, will make his debut against his old mates.

England's Sport of Kings Fast Becoming Barely Tolerated

Few Horses Left Are Rationed and This Is Begrudged by One Segment of Population

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Newmarket, England, March 14.—This ancient racing town, once so horse-conscious that residents all but washed their faces with saddle soap, is sadly watching Britain's sport of kings become a barely tolerated pastime.

The number of blooded horses has dwindled from 6,000 to 2,300, and annual export receipts have dropped from $3,500,000 to practically nothing.

Horses Begrudged

And that ration is begrudged by one segment of the public, which would like to destroy the horses so hens may have more to eat and lay more eggs for egg-short Britons.

Newmarket has been hardest hit of all British racing towns.

Where racing began on beautiful heaths in the reign of King Charles II, as many as 1,500 horses once trained for big British and American races. Now only 200 train in this center of breeding and training.

Many horses were destroyed and others shipped to the United States.

Racing's Fate in Doubt

Capt. Cecil Boyd-Rochfort, noted trainer of American-owned horses whose purses from 1926 to the start of the war totaled $2,442,410, is one of the few still training.

"Racing's fate is very much in doubt," he said pessimistically. "All we can do is carry on. It mustn't die out, we feel."

Two years ago Boyd-Rochfort was training 65 horses. He now has 25, including four owned by Marshall Field, three by William Woodward and one by John Hay Whitney, all American stables. He is pointing the filly Suncastle for the historic Derby.

Wallace Wade Speaks Before Scholastics

By a Staff Correspondent

Durham, N. C., March 14.—One after-dinner speaker who really gets in the mood for talking after the first few minutes of an address is Coach Wallace Wade, Duke University's benign grid mentor . . . Speaking at the annual banquet during the Southern Scholastic Basketball Tournament here today, the coach started with sportsmanship and before he was through had the world political situation well in hand. . . . "If folks had been as interested in things for the good of the country 15 years ago," he said, "we wouldn't be in the condition we are now" . . . They're still talking about the hard-luck Charlies of Bethesda-Chevy Chase, who have run into modified Eifel Towers and lost their first-round engagements in the last two tournaments here . . . Fans love the never-say-die attitude of the Barons, though, exemplified particularly by little Duke Hashagan. . . . Roosevelt High, after the most impressive opening effort of the meet, was a favorite to take the crown . . .

Highest scorer during the regular season of all the teams in competition here was Furman Riddle, brother of Greenville's most youthful player . . . He rammed home a total of 309 points in 20 games, slightly over 15 a game. Followers of Roosevelts' sturdy Riders had an idea they might come through at least the first round when Hymie Perlo, classic captain of the D. C. interhigh champs, appeared more serious than ever before . . . Sort of like he wanted to close out his scholastic career with an exceptionally good effort

St. Albans, 'Y' Matmen Lead Tournament

Contrary to the opinion of some of the residents, there were no grisly goings-on in the Massachusetts Avenue Heights sector last night. Those grunts and groans emanating from the vicinity of the Cathedral were simply a by-product of the annual District of Columbia A. A. U. wrestling tournament preliminaries, which were staged at the St. Alban's School gym last night.

Fond parents crowded the gym to watch their offspring, ranging from paperweight-sized moppets to full-fledged heavyweights, perform, and when the smoke had cleared away the St. Alban's School juniors and the Y. M. C. A. seniors held impressive leads in the team standings for their respective divisions.

In the seven senior division final matches which will be contested tonight, the Y will be represented by six men. Coach Tom Clayton's St. Alban's team leads in the junior division race, placing 17 wrestlers in the 16 final bouts.

Snyder Wins Match

The standout match amongst the seniors last night was won by Blondie Snyder, the St. Alban's captain, who scored a fall over Covington, of the University of Maryland, in 2:45. Both lads went to it with a will from the start, but the St. Alban's groaner was the master all the way despite the fact he was handicapped by ear injury.

Dick Pippel, of the "Y," turned in the best performance in the junior ranks, fighting his way to the finals with two victories. He gained a fall over De Fontaine, of St. Alban's, son of the French Ambassador, in 34 seconds in one match and came back later to decision Dubose, of St. Alban's, for a shot at the 70-pound crown tonight.

Wallace in Ill Luck

One of the ironies of the tournament cost Bobby Wallace, Police Boys Club's 81-pounder, a titular chance when he was forced to forfeit his preliminary match to Furmage, of S. E. B. C. Bobby, who is "almost 10," went to choir practice Thursday night at St. Stephen's Church and injured his head in a scuffle there, necessitating stitches. He was on deck for his match last night, nevertheless, but the doctor waved him away.

Tonight there will be 23 final matches for the 1941 District A. A. U. championship, starting at 7:30. Seven of these contests will be in the senior division, ten will be in the Junior A division (15 years and under), and six in the Junior B (16-17 years). Gold medals will be awarded to the new title holders and silver awards will be made to the defeated finalists. A championship trophy will be offered for the team scoring the greatest number of points. The team race is between Y. M. C. A. and St. Anban's, with the school boys a favorite on the strength of their preliminary showing.

Young 'Matty' Rejoins Air Service

Son of the Great Mathewson Is Aiding In New Defense Work

By the Associated Press

Christy Mathewson, jr., son of the baseball immortal and in his own right a crack Army flier, is back in the Air Corps, but he has to be content with a swivel chair instead of a pilot's cockpit.

He lost a leg in a crash in China after a brief career as a soldier of fortune, helping train young Chinese aviators to fight Japan.

The Air Corps put him to work this week as an aeronautical specialist helping keep records of a joint aircraft committee for the Army, Navy and the British purchasing commission.

Husky, smiling and alert, he still can fly, but any air travel he may do for the Army will be as a passenger. He proved his disability was not complete, however, by a single solo flight since the 1933 crackup in China in which his bride met death and he was gravely injured.

Inspired to become an aviator by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's 1927 transatlantic flight, young Mathewson won his Army pilot's wings the next year and flew for the Air Corps for two years and a half until he was retired from active service because of lack of War Department funds.

With a group of other American pilots, he went to China to serve as an instructor at a Chinese nationalist government school at Hangchow, China. The "boss" was Col. John H. Jouett, now president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

Benefit Golf Here Draws 16 Star Pros

Sixteen big-name golf stars have been promised for the British War Relief Fund match here at Chevy Chase on April 10, it was learned yesterday. The Professional Golfers Association, through its president, Tom Walsh, has assured local comitteemen it will cooperate by paying any necessary transportation expenses.

Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase pro who is now at his winter post at Indian Creek Club, Miami, has been in contact with P. G. A. officials down there and has submitted a list of 22 names, from which he has been assured at least 16 will be present.

All Big Names

Names on the list submitted by Barnett include virtually every big-name golfer, including the National Open and P. G. champions, Lawson Little and Byron Nelson, respectively, and the winter tour sensations, Benny Hogan and Sammy Snead. Walsh and Corcoran and Former Amateur Champion Francis Oulmet may be here while names of the pros include Harold McSpaden, Denny Shute, Tony Manero, Clayton Heafner, Lloyd Mangrum, Jimmy Demaret, Jimmy Thompson, Craig Wood, Dick Metz, Johnny Revolta, Frank Walsh, Johnny Bulla, Tommy Armour and Tony Penna.

Several of the pros on the list will obviously not be here, however, including Bobby Jones, who has already notified the local committee he will be unable to attend, and Henry Picard, who will take over his new pro job at Oklahoma City before that time. Gene Sarazen was mentioned but has a previous engagement.

Local Pros Invited

The event will be considered a success if only a portion of the stars put in an appearance, however, and the starting field will probably be about three foursomes, including the local pros.

District professionals invited to compete will be Wiffy Cox, Fred McLeod, Allan Burton and Barnett.

The Augusta Master's tournament, last stop on the winter tour, ends Monday, April 6, and will give the players who plan to compete ample time to get here for the match.

Tickets for the matches, sponsored by the Order of Scottish Plan and Daughters of Scotia, in co-operation with the Chevy Chase Club, through Robert Stead, jr., went on sale yesterday and were placed in local golf shops. The entire proceeds will be turned over to the British War Relief Fund.

Play will be 18-holes, medal, with probably a gold medal to low scorer.

Manager Resigns

Youngstown, Ohio, March 14 (AP). The Youngstown club of the Mid-Atlantic Baseball League announced today the resignation of Rod Whitney as manager of the St. Louis Browns' farm team. No successor has been named.

Indoor Meet Tonight Draws 450 Athletes

One of the greatest collections of champions ever assembled in the South Atlantic area will be paraded before Washingtonians at Uline's Arena this afternoon and tonight when over 450 athletes from 23 cities and 12 States are featured in the Washington Athletic Association's indoor games.

The preliminaries are to be launched this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock and the competition continues through 11 o'clock tonight.

Any number of District records are certain to be mowed down and several world records threatened when nationally and world famous competitors hit their stride in one of the final major meets of the fast fading indoor season.

Probably the outstanding bid for a world's record will be launched in the pole vault which involves four of the world's ranking stars. Earle Meadows, the world's indoor champion representing the Southern California A. A., will be featured, but will be closely pressed by Dick Ganslen, of the Shore A. A. of New Jersey; Kenneth Dills, of the University of Southern California, and Howard Jensen, of Temple University.

Many Stars Entered

Other nationally renowned athletic figures who are to compete tonight are: John Campbell, Fordham University, quarter mile; Al Blozis and Jack Doolan, Georgetown University, shot put and mile; George Kroupa and Capt. Sam Moore, University of Pennsylvania, sprints and high jump, respectively; Jim Kehoe, Washington A. A., 1,000; Allan Tomlich, unattached, Detroit, hurdles and 50-yard sprints; Charles Beetham, unattached, Columbus, Ohio, and Joe Zeitler, New York A. C., 1,000; Joe McCluskey, New York A. A.; Don Lash, Indiana; Forrest Efaw, Oklahoma A. and M., and George DeGeorge, New York A. C., 2-mile invitation steeplechase, and Walter Mehl, Wisconsin, National Youth Administration; John Munski, Missouri; Gene Venzke, New York A. C., and Tommy Fields, Maryland, President's Cup mile.

Mehl, the greatest miler of the year, will be favored in the President's Cup mile, but may be extended by Munski, Venzke and the dark horse of the lot, Tommy Fields.

Probably the most attractive and novel event ever introduced here will be featured in the 2-mile invitation steeplechase which will find two of the outstanding athletes of this generation closely trailed by two other competitors. World champion Joe McCluskey, of the New York A. C., will be challenged by Don Lash, the flying Indiana State policeman, for a world's record in this event, but both will be pressed vigorously by Forest Efaw and George DeGeorge. McCluskey, Efaw and DeGeorge all beat McCluskey's old world record in a blanket finish that was won by McCluskey in the National A. A. U. games recently.

Penn to Compete

The star-studded intercollegiate competition will feature a triangular competition featuring Georgetown and Fordham Universities and the University of Pennsylvania.

In a move late yesterday the Washington Athletic Association agreed to pit its 1-mile relay team against the great Georgetown University freshman team which will spot the Washington A. A. 35 yards.

The marathon games also will feature interscholastic and U. S. Government workers' competition as well as the 300-yard run sponsored by the District A. A. U. An intercollegiate football relay involving the gridiron stars of local colleges also will be a novelty event on schedule.

With CONSIDINE

THE BASEBALL FRONT, MARCH 14.—To the gentle accompaniment of the murmur of the waves on the nearby beach, and to the soft rumble of arteries hardening, the Three-quarter Century Baseball League is nearing the completion of its fifteenth season at St. Petersburg. The Kids and Kubs, the only two clubs in this famous league of ancient men, are tied neck and neck, and the Greybeards and Grandmas who sit in the sun on the green benches along St. Pete's streets say they'll be blessed if they can pick a winner. It's that close.

CONSIDINE

The old gaffers play twice a week, down in one corner of the field where the Yankees and Cardinals train. They play at 10 a. m. on Wednesday and Saturdays, and when they do play the little wooden grandstand is generally filled to overflowing with the Townsendities and the other fine old people who have chosen St. Pete as the winter playground of their pleasant second childhood.

When the league first started, the young blades of 50 or so who were called on to conduct it and umpire its games were inclined to clown a little. But they stopped all that. The old players are in earnest when they play these rickety games of softball, and the venerable folks in the grandstand are just as serious. The cackling cheers from the stands ring loud and true, and disapproval of the umpiring results in sharp indignation, even to the banging of ear trumpets on wooden seats.

Players on the Kids and Kubs must be at least 75 years old before they are eligible. There is another team down here at St. Pete called the Pelicans. But the Pelicans aren't considered much pumpkins by the Kids and the Kubs. You must be only 50 years old to become eligible for the Pelicans. But when a Pelican does graduate to the Kids or the Kubs there is a little celebrating. The new member is welcomed with a nice round of applause, and there is a new face in the crowd at the next dance. The Mrs. goes too, for the old girls never let their gaffers get very far out of sight.

The Kids and Kubs wear white duck trousers, white shirts, tennis shoes (they call them sneakers) and baseball caps. They are pretty jealous about who gets on their teams. They have had distressing ringer trouble from time to time. The last time was when a brisk little old man, with a country doctor goatee, was welcomed into the fold of the Kids. The first time he came to bat he whacked a hit to left center, minced his way to second base and then turned a cartwheel to show that he still had a lot of juice left in the old joints. The rival Kubs became suspicious and began an investigation, and darn if they didn't find that the old boy was only 73. Made a lot of talk on the green benches that afternoon, and some of the good folks earnestly mentioned the sinner that evening at the Bible class.

Pierce Gahan, of St. Pete's Department of Recreation, accidentally started the Spavin circuit in 1926 when a vigorous old boy named Dr. Emery came to his office one day and asked for a baseball and bat. Said he wanted to play. Gahan was a young man of 40 at the time and he thought he should advise the septuagenarian applicant to try checkers, shuffleboard or the other standard games for old timers which the city sponsors. But the old boy would have none of them, so Gahan provided him and his spindly old playmates with a soft ball, small bat and a place to play. It has been going ever since. Darndest player they ever had was an Ohioan named Jess Berger. Played until he was 80 and was still the best hitter on his team. He was a home-run hitter of such dimensions that often he made two circuits of the sacks and usually ended his artery-jarring trek by doing a handstand at home plate.

Frank Peckinpaugh, father of Roger, and 79 years old, is the mainstay shortstop of the Kids. Four or five others are pressing 80, too. The death not long ago of a fine old player named Corporal Judd, a Civil War veteran who passed away unexpectedly at 92, and the death of the league's best fan, Capt. Charles Eldridge, 103, haven't put a damper on the spirits of the boys. Singularly enough, in view of the energy the old boys put into their games, there never has been a death on the field. Only ruptures, Charley horses and sore points. But several players have died not long after playing in the games.

They must have died happy, for St. Pete is a wonderful place for old folks. There should be some New Deal fund to send all the septuagenarians, octogenarians and nonogenarians of the country to St. Pete each winter. You should see the tanned, alert faces of these old folk, gossiping in the sun, attending their open-air religious services, or playing their games. One schuffle-board club here has 5,000 members. And there's chess, dominos, croquet, roque and lawn bowling for all these old boys and girls—who look so much as if they had stepped out of Ring Lardner's immortal "Golden Honeymoon."

Three Upsets Mark A. A. U. Ring Battles

The battle was free from knockdowns, but was a punching spree of top caliber. The crowd of 1,000 disapproved of the decision, however.

Another upset occurred in the senior featherweight class when Lewis Hanbury, of the Merrick Club, outpointed Al Horton, from the St. Mary's Boys Club and the favorite.

On leaving the arena, Horton complained of feeling faint and he was taken to Emergency Hospital, where his condition was described as a possible brain concussion.

Alan Shreve, Merrick Club, outpointed Lewis Pavone in the third upset of the card for the right to enter the semifinal round of the welterweight class. It was a close fight with Pavone losing his lead in the closing seconds.

NOVICE

SENIOR

Cochado and Forte Work Here Today

District fight fans will be offered a preview today of Tommy Forte and Victor Cochado, who clash in the feature of the boxing show to be staged Monday night at Turner's Arena. The rivals will work out in public this afternoon at the Huron gym, 511 Eleventh Street Northwest. Forte drills at 1 o'clock and Corchado an hour later.

Forte is rated No. 1 bantam contender by the N. B. A. and Ring Magazine. He is moving to the featherweight class for his battle Monday and has operated with success in this division. Corchado is the featherweight champion of Puerto Rico and leaves soon to defend his title in his native country.

In an eight-rounder, Pedro Hernandez, also from Puerto Rico, meets Johnny Marcelline, of Philadelphia. They are featherweights.

Gabe Menandez and Joe Turner are trying to sign Joey Archibald to meet the winner. They also are dickering to bring Harry Hurst, popular Canadian, back to the local fight wars.

Small Time Drives to Victory in Daytona Purse at Tropical

Irish Ivy Is Beaten Half Length

Thrilling Duel Is Staged in Stretch; Victor Pays $5.10; Balladine Third

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 14.—Serving notice that she will be hard to beat in the $2,000-added Viscaya Stakes, a half-mile fixture for 2-year-old fillies scheduled for March 29, H. L. Straus' Small Time drove to a half-length triumph in the Daytona Purse today. Favorite at $5.10 for $2 in the field of 10 lassies, the Happy Time miss outlasted W. W. Adams' Irish Ivy for her third triumph out of four trips to the post. She was clocked in the excellent time of 0:47 flat.

Irish Ivy, not eligible for the Viscaya, was easily second, five lengths in advance of Balladine. Mike Caffarella was aboard the winner, which carried top weight of 118 pounds.

The crowd was treated to a thrilling duel. Small Time and Irish Ivy battled it out all the way, daylight clear of Balladine. The front pair pulled farther away in the stretch. Irish Ivy poked her head in front temporarily, but Small Time proved the sturdier of the two in the last, straining strides, aided no little by the strong handling of Caffarella. Balladine just lasted to save the show from Quick Conquest.

McCreary, got down to business early and romped home on Embrace, which paid $9.10 for $2 in the first race. Pajas was second and Alcinous third.

The surprise win price of $12.10 was returned on Cherry Trifle, McCreary's mount in the sixth. His eighth-race winner, Redrock Canyon, paid $10.40.

EMBRACE, a forward contender throughout, shook off the leaders through the stretch and won going away. PAJAS worked her way up on the outside, closed stoutly, but never threatened the winner. ALCINOUS, in tight quarters early, finished with a rush.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:40. Off at 2:41⅕. Winner, C. J. Wensley's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TYRONE, $9.80, $4.50, $3.40; GOLD MESH, $4.10, $3.70; MAHDI, $4.40.

TYRONE, in tight quarters after leaving the backstretch, swung around the leaders entering the stretch, disposed of MAHDI, but then faltered and just lasted. GOLD MESH, pinched back in the opening quarter mile, gained steadily when clear and, closing fast, would have won in another stride. MAHDI displayed speed, saved ground into the stretch, but then weakened.

Daily Double—EMBRACE and TYRONE paid $49.50

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 3:08. Off at 3:09. Winner, R. R. Greenlee's b. f. (3), by Ksar—Treadhaven. Trained by W. M. Emerson. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:46⅕.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TREADON, $14.40, $9.10, $6.10; BLUMERE, $6.40, $5.20; MYSTERY LAD, $20.60.

TREADON followed the pace under light restraint to the stretch turn, moved up determinedly when placed to pressure, took command and held BLUMERE safe. The latter, away slowly, closed a big gap and was probably the best. MYSTERY LAD, well upon the outside early, outgamed OLD FRIEND when it came to a drive.

FOURTH RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For 2-year-old fillies. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:38. Off at 3:41. Winner, H. L. Straus' ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SMALL TIME, $5.10, $3.60, $2.90; IRISH IVY, $4.40, $3.20; BALLADINE, $3.10.

SMALL TIME, on the outside rounding the turn, drew out entering the stretch, but then faltered and was under brisk pressure to withstand IRISH IVY'S bid. IRISH IVY, in close pursuit in the early stages, dropped back turning into the stretch and came to the inside, closed gamely, but could not get up. BALLADINE, prominent throughout, bore out on the turn, but held the others safe.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 4:09. Winner, W. Dress' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TONY WEAVER, $31.40, $15.00, $6.10; LITTLE DAVEY, $5.80, $3.40; GREENY, $3.00.

TONY WEAVER broke forwardly, followed the pace closely, raking on the outside, drew clear rounding the turn and maintained his advantage to the end. LITTLE DAVEY, in tight quarters early, saved ground entering the stretch and just lasted long enough to stave off GREENY'S bid. The latter, outrun the first half mile, finished with a rush on the outside through the stretch.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 4:38. Off at 4:38½. Winner, W. R. CHERRY TRIFLE, rated off the pace until leaving the backstretch, moved up steadily when called upon, wore BESS B. down through the stretch and won going away. BESS B. slipped through on the inside rounding the lower turn, drew clear on the stretch turn, but was not equal to the winner. WHITE HOT also stole through on the inside and disposed of the others.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:08. Off at 5:08½. Winner, D. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH BLAME, $17.60, $6.50, $5.10; DIANAPAT, $4.10, $4.10; OLD RIVER, $10.50.

HIGH BLAME, eased off the pace until well around the far turn, closed with determination when called upon and shook off DIANAPAT when the real test came. DIANAPAT, a forward contender all the way, took a brief lead entering the stretch, but could not keep stride with the winner in the stretch run. OLD RIVER, slow to set going, closed fast in the final quarter mile.

REDROCK CANYON, under restraint until leaving the backstretch, moved up gamely on the outside, assumed command and held sway to the end. NOODLES, slow to get going, responded to strong pressure in the final quarter mile and finished with a belated rush. GAY HOUR, prominent and saving ground the entire trip, faltered in the stretch run.

Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al:

Due to the fact that some of our record books have been missing, I have been unable to get around to answering some queries. However, here's one I want to settle once and for all. So if you think you are going to argue about it soon, please clip this paragraph: The race in which Equipoise was disqualified and Mr. Khayyam was declared the winner was the Metropolitan Handicap at Belmont Park on May 19, 1934. This is the race on which most of the comedy of the play, "Three Men on a Horse," was based, but it also was a tragic race because Mrs. Bosley's Chase Me broke his leg entering the stretch and had to be destroyed. Equipoise, with Workman up, swung far out entering the stretch and then cut over in front of Mr. Khayyam, for which he was disqualified. Jones rode Mr. Khayyam and Steffen was on Sun Archer, the third horse. The others in order of finish were Ladysman, Faireno, Springsteel, War Glory, Good Advice and, of course, Chase Me did not finish. Jockey Slate was riding the ill-fated gelding. The odds on Equipoise were 7 to 10, and Mr. Khayyam was a 12-1 shot. Some of the fastest 2-year-olds in the Miami area march postward today in the second running of the $2,000 added Orange Blossom Stakes. Inaugurated in 1940 and won last season by General Jack, 2-year-old colts and geldings will go postward in quest of the winner's share of the purse, expected to net in the neighborhood of $1,900. Favored in the early rundown is the Allen T. Simmons entry which will be drawn from among Bold Question, Eternal Bull, General Jean and Zo Zo. Seldom, in the recent history of the Miami turf, has one outfit revealed a quartet of such fleet young runners, and any one of the four may prove to be the ultimate winner. Bold Question is the mainstay of the barn, although the unbeaten Zo Zo may yet prove the best of the lot. General Jean and Eternal Bull also have revealed their own fitness.

BILL.

First race—BE PREPARED finds a distance that suits in the mile and a sixteenth of the day's opener. Gets a modest weight assignment and I'm going to string along. CHIEF GAMBLE gets a good figure and promises to be in the thick of contention. FLAG POST should go well.

Second race—CANTOVINO gets in with feather weight and likes this sprint route. Young Haskell will do

Fewer Agents, More Sales

The 60,000 agents selling ordinary life insurance in the United Statest today are writing a greater volume of business than the 80,000 agents active in 1934, claims Robert Haviland, vice president of the Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. He addressed the March luncheon yesterday of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association at the Lee Sheraton Hotel.

"Today, 25 per cent fewer agents are rendering a greater public service, and earning a better income, because today the agent is better qualified and better equipped to merit public confidence," the guest-speaker explained.

Mr. Haviland was introduced by Jack Crofoot, local general agent of the Connecticut General. Richard Griswold announced that 180 underwriters have already made reservations for the Chartered Life Underwriters' annual dinner, to be held at the Carlton Hotel next Tuesday night.

Store Sales Gain 15 Per Cent

In spite of February this year having one less day than in 1940, sales of seven Washington department stores increased 15 per cent during the month as compared with last year. All cities in the Fifth Reserve District likewise showed gains, according to the monthly report of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

The Fifth District's gain in February was 14 per cent over last year. Individual cities reported gains as follows: Baltimore, 14 per cent; Lynchburg, 6 per cent; Norfolk, 44 per cent; Richmond, 9 per cent. State gains were: Maryland, 14 per cent; Virginia, 14 per cent; West Virginia, 10 per cent.

In Washington, department store sales for the January-February period were 18 per cet more than in the same 1940 period, while the Fifth District as a whole showed an advance of 15 per cent.

New Policies Set Record

A record-breaking increase of more than $37,000,000 of insurance in force during 1940 is shown in the annual report of the Life Insurance Co. of Virginia received here yesterday by the company's Washington branch managers, A. E. Call and F. X. Callahan.

Admitted assets of the 70-year-old company were increased by $5,687,184 and now stand at $111,021,357, President Bradford H. Walker described 1940 operations as one of the most satisfactory years in the company's history.

Store Mortality Surveyed

Publishing sample results from studies in several cities, department experts said that persons starting small businesses on small capital usually are over optimistic about the immediate profits.

Grocery stores had the biggest "infant mortality rate." The study showed that out of 100 grocery stores opening in the same year, only 40 would be running the second year, 26 the third year, 19 the fourth year, and then the survivors had a pretty good chance.

Acting Secretary Named

Preston W. Grant, secretary of the Insurance Club of Washington, will leave the city on an extended business trip. During his absence, C. Nelson Bean will take over his insurance club duties.

Retail Sales Gain Despite Snow

New York, March 14 (AP).—Retail trade, despite snowy weather, continued to expand moderately this week and dollar volume of sales averaged 6 to 10 per cent above last year for the country as a whole, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

The cold slowed down sales of spring apparel, but more than offsetting trade declines in the clothing category were improved retail totals in home-furnishings and automobiles.

Strong demand was noted for cooking utensils, dinette sets, sunlamps, beds, bedding, slipcovers, curtains, sheets, and pillowcases. In some cases, stores were having difficulty maintaining stocks.

Securities Offerings Heavier in Week

Of the total, 85 per cent represented new money rather than refunding of existing obligations. Most of it was taken by municipalities, however, only a modest amount going to private industry.

Gold Shipments Slump in Month

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department said yesterday gold imports slumped to $108,615,043 in February, about half the January figure.

Officials said gold shipments have been slackening due both to transportation difficulties and the fact that huge shipments in the past few years had already brought to the United States most of the world's monetary gold.

Steel Plants Hum 7 Days a Week

New York, March 14 (AP).—The American Iron and Steel Institute said today steel plants had been running 24 hours a day to produce metal for defense and other purposes.

"Weekend interruptions have not been a factor in the steel industry, where lights blaze at night and work proceeds at close to capacity levels even on Saturday and Sunday," the institute said.

"Working shifts in steel plants have been arranged in such a way as to insure continuity of operations. Yet the average number of hours worked weekly has been less than forty, despite the virtually uninterrupted use of productive facilities."

The institute added the three-shift system was in use around the clock at blast and open-hearth furnaces.

United Engineering & Foundry

United Engineering & Foundry Co., one of the Nation's leading producers of rolling mill equipment, reported 1940 was the second best year in its 40-year existence, being exceeded only by 1937.

The company's net earnings during the year were $3,724,480, equal to $4.47 per share on outstanding common stock, as compared to net earnings of $2,149,328 in 1939, equivalent to $2.55 per share.

Sharp Upturn Continues in Food Staples

In the interim traders have been trying to appraise the market effects of advancing freight tonnage costs affecting major import commodities, the pending legislative action on President Roosevelt's request for a new $7,000,000,000 defense appropriation and probable repercussions of intensified action in European war zones.

Raw sugar climbed to the highest levels since the start of the war in September, 1939. Refiners paid .02 to .03 of a cent a pound above the previous day's prices for substantial tonnages, establishing the market at 3.30 cents. Refined sugar held at 4.85 cents a pound, a fifth of a cent a pound above the price ruling a week ago.

Other foods commanding mounting prices were Santos Coffee, up .10 to .13 of a cent a pound; cottonseed oil, up .20 to .24 of a cent; cocoa, up .16 to .20 of a cent; Chicago wheat, up ¾ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel.

Raw cotton, on which the trade now talks hopefully of reopened export channels under the lease-lend provisions, added new gains of 70 cents to $1.05 a bale in futures dealings. Hides contracts were marked up .08 to .13 of a cent. Some rubber contracts closed .30 of a cent a pound higher.

The Associated Press Index of 30 wholesale commodities traded in cash markets reached the highest since November, 1937, at 79.06 per cent of the 1926 average, compared with 78.96 per cent yesterday.

Grass Foods in Future?

Kansas City, March 14 (AP).—Sale to the Quaker Oats Co. of Chicago of a substantial interest in patents held by American Dairies, Inc., for extraction of high vitamin products from young grasses was announced today by Lynwood H. Smith, president of the latter company.

Smith said the Quaker company also had acquired an interest in the Greenmelk Co., Ltd., Guelph, Ontario, and formed a new company known as Cerophyl Laboratories, Inc., to continue research, manufacture and sales of grass products.

Dr. W. R. Graham who reported on the high vitamin potentialities of grass in a paper to the American Chemical Society last April will serve as vice president.

Willys Begins Work On Defense Orders

Toledo, Ohio, March 14 (AP).—Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., today began volume production on its $20,000,000 backlog of defense orders, J. W. Frazer, president, announced.

Although retooling and purchase of nearly $3,000,000 in machinery was necessary to begin the operation, he said, the work of the ordnance division has started ahead of schedule without upsetting capacity automobile production.

The first defense item to move down company production lines was recoil cylinders for antiaircraft guns. Frazer said the company will begin delivering breech housings within ten days.

Studebaker Sales Set Month's Record

South Bend, Ind., March 14 (AP).—Studebaker Corporation reported today the largest February domestic retail deliveries of automobiles and trucks in the history of the company—8,306 units compared with 8,356 in January and 7,490 in February, 1940.

Factory sales were the largest since 1928—10,010 units compared with 8,115 in January and 9,446 in February, 1940.

Specialties Buoyant in Steady Stock List; Cloudier War Reports Restrain Traders

New York, March 14.—Except for quiet strength of specialties and assortment of senior issues, stocks were unable to make much headway in today's market. Steels were out in front at the start, but backed down to end where they left off Thursday. A little selling at the last reduced or canceled early gains of fractions to a point or so in many instances. A few odd-lot stocks managed to emerge with advances of 2 to 5.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 41.4. Of more than 1,200 issues listed on the exchange only 588 were traded. Dealings were slack through out and transfers totaled 320,041 shares against 339,050 the day before.

Outstanding news inspiration was scarce, brokers said, although some early buying was based on the belief the market had discounted a lot of unfavorable domestic and foreign happenings and was in shape to turn about if offered any encouragement. Earnings statements and company profits prospects buoyed by defense spending helped individual shares.

Bullish restraints still were seen in the outlook for soaring taxes, cloudier war developments as air bombing raids were intensified over England and Germany, and in the confusing labor picture as related to defense industries.

While this week's motor production jumped to the highest level for any week since mid-May, automotive stocks were as mixed as other departments. General Motors was off ¼ and Chrysler up ½.

Despite the indecision elsewhere, Climax-Molybdenum, General Gas & Electric preferred and Commonwealth & Southern preferred pushed into new high ground for the year. Modest improvement was retained by American Machine & Metal, Santa Fe, Great Northern, N. Y. Shipbuilding, Newport News Shipbuilding, Electric Boat, Wesson Oil, Chickasha Oil, Glidden, Continental Baking "A," Aviation Corporation, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Curtiss-Wright, U. S. Rubber, Western Union and American Smelting.

Revere Copper & Brass preferred was up 5¼. The company reported net of $2.52 a common share for 1940 versus 19 cents in 1939. The common lost a fraction.

Douglas Aircraft suffered a net loss of 3 points. Moderately in arrears were New York Central, Standard Oil of New Jersey, American Can, Consolidated Edison, American Telephone and Phelps Dodge.

Persistent climbing tendencies of industrial staples was again a helpful influence for securities. Cotton ended with advances of 70 cents to $1.05 a bale. Wheat at Chicago was up ¼ to ⅝ of a cent a bushel and corn unchanged to ahead ⅛. Bonds were irregularly higher.

In an uneven curb gains were held by American Cyanamid "B," Aviation & Transportation, Bell Aircraft, Brewster Aero, Humble Oil, New Jersey Zinc, Pennsylvania-Central Airlines, St. Regis Paper and Venezuelan Petroleum. Volume here was around 89,000 shares against 81,000 yesterday.

Revere Copper Profit Soars to $2.52 a Share

Revere Copper & Brass, Inc., one of the largest copper fabricators in the world, reported yesterday consolidated net income for 1940 of $2,916,011, or $2.52 a common share, compared with $1,615,069, or 20 cents a share, in 1939.

Unpaid cumulative dividends last February 1 amounted to $50.75 a share on the 7 per cent preferred stock, $13.12 a share on the 5¼ per cent preferred, and $4 a share on the $4 "class" stock.

The report stated that as the net earnings of the class A stock were above $8 a share, dividends on that issue became cumulative to the extent of $8 a share.

C. Donald Dallas, president, pointed out to stockholders that much of the company's output now goes to defense industries. Dallas issued what he called a "first annual report to the American people." He said:

"Revere is a vital cog in the defense production program. . . .

"Our 1940 sales were the greatest in our history. With sales at their highest level and expenses, including taxes, far in excess of anything previous, we made a net profit of $2,916,011—not a record high but a satisfactory one. . . . Except for $166,555 paid in dividends to holders of Revere's preferred stocks, the entire amount is being held in reserve for today's needs and tomorrow's emergencies—in trust, you may say, for you."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 14 (AP).—Wheat prices moved upward in a creeping recovery today that reflected strength in certain other commodities and general market implications of stepped up domestic industrial activity and British requirements under the lend-lease law.

Wheat traders had nothing definite on which to base purchase orders except reports of Oriental demand on the Pacific Coast and renewal of French requests for grain. For that reason, buying was not on a large scale and was rather timid.

Wheat dipped about ⅛ cent at the start, later steadied and at one time rallied for net gains of ⅛@¼ cent. The close was ⅛@¼ higher than yesterday. May, 66⅛@66¼; July, 62⅜@62½. Corn was unchanged to ¼ up. May, 62⅝; July, 62¾; oats, ⅛@¼ higher; soybeans, ⅜@⅝ up; rye unchanged to ⅜ lower and lard, 5@10 higher.

Food Price Index Rises 0.8 Per Cent

The index advanced 0.8 per cent from the previous figure of $2.59 to $2.61 for the period ended March 11. This marked a new high for more than three years and a gain of 4.4 per cent above the $2.50 recorded in the first week of this year, while the margin of increase over the 1940 comparative of $2.31 was widened to 13.0 per cent.

This week's advances included flour, wheat, corn, rye, oats, barley, lard, sugar, cottonseed oil, tea, cocoa, and lambs. Declines appeared in mess pork, cheese, peas, potatoes, steers, and hogs.

The Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index represents the sum total of the price per pound of 31 foods in general use. Comparative figures for recent weeks and years follow:

National defense will be much on the air as well as in the air today. No fewer than five programs which you'll hear over WJSV are to be devoted to various phases of it.

Beginning at 12:45 p. m. there'll be the new CBS series called "Jobs for Defense" in which CBS correspondent Eric Sevareid interviews John D. Biggers, production division director of the OPM, as well as Sidney Hillman, associate director of the organization, on employment needs in different sections of the country.

At 6 p. m. "Report to the Nation" will tell how the Government is speeding up the armament program by distributing contracts.

At 7, labor experts and industrialists will discuss strikes in defense industries on CBS's "The People's Platform." The speakers at this informal round-table will be Elinore Herrick, regional director for the NLRB; William Collins, Eastern representative for the A. F. of L.; Walter Merritt, corporation lawyer and labor specialist, and John Zellers, vice president of Remington-Rand.

At 11 p. m., Hugh Conover is to interview several members of Washington's Naval Reserve Battalion as a feature of Naval Reserve week.

Then, of course, President Roosevelt will have something to say about the state of the Nation from the White House correspondents' dinner at 9:30.

Contract Bridge

Simply bidding a slam successfully is not always enough in championship competition. It is important that the most profitable declaration be reached, or a poor score will result as other pairs will be sure to reach the better bid.

This prompted declarer of today's hand to make a reckless and, under ordinary circumstances, ridiculous, play. At six no-trump, he saw at once that seven hearts could be made, and therefore, all pairs who had bid six hearts would beat his score at no-trump. He could count 12 tricks and 13 if the spade finesse succeeded. This seemed reasonable as South had bid the suit. Thirteen tricks at no-trump would insure his winning over heart bidders who had stopped at six.

Even though he received the frightening opening lead of a diamond, which he won with the ace, he boldly determined on the spade finesse and took it on the third trick. North captured the spade king, led five diamonds to defeat West five tricks at a bid that was a laydown. It would appear like madness were not West's reasons known; and, even in this light, it would have been wiser to refrain from finessing until the end when he should have learned more about his opponent's cards.

For Maryland and Virginia—Fair and warmer Saturday; Sunday cloudy with mild temperature; rain Sunday afternoon and night.

Conditions

Fair weather has prevailed during the last 24 hours almost generally over the eastern half of the United States under the influence of the extensive anticyclone, which is accompanied by dry air of polar origin. The highest sea-level pressure at 7:30 p. m. was 1,026.4 millibars (30.31 inches), at Cincinnati, Ohio. The western disturbance is advancing slowly eastward over the southern Plateau and southern Rocky Mountain region, Clayton, N. Mex., 1,006.4 millibars (29.89 inches), and it has been attended by rain from southern and central California eastward to the southern Rocky Mountain region and by light snow in portions of Colorado, Wyoming, and the central and northern Plains States. The disturbance that was centered over South Carolina Thursday night is now moving rapidly eastward over the ocean with center tonight about 900 miles east of Jacksonville, Fla., with lowest pressure about 1,000 millibars (29.83 inches). This disturbance is increasing in intensity and is attended by strong winds over a wide area. Pressure is relatively high over the Far Northwest, Boise, Idaho, 1,019.6 millibars (30.11 inches). The temperature has risen slightly over most sections from the Rocky Mountain region eastward.

Roosevelt To Ask Broader Security Plan

Broadening of the social security program to include more people and increased benefits to the aged indigent will be asked of Congress this spring, President Roosevelt said yesterday.

Favoring gradual broadening of the law rather than any short-cut to Utopia, the President said that there should be a new old-age benefits formula that would help poorer States provide more adequate pensions without at the same time penalizing richer States.

The President's announcement drew attention to the fact that there are at present more than 53,000,000 social security accounts, but that other millions are still excluded from coverage.

Broad Range in Pensions

It also centered attention on the broad range in pensions being paid to the needy aged on the present system whereby the Federal Government contributes $1 for each $1 the States pay, up to a top Federal contribution of $20.

This has result, according to latest official figures, in a top pension in California of $37.87 per recipient per month, compared with a low of $7.37 for Arkansas. The average payment in the District is $25 to $26.

New Formula Studied

The President said that a formula was being studied that would base the Federal grant on average per capital wealth of the State, in a reverse ratio calling for larger grants where the per capita wealth was smaller.

Richer States should not be penalized, he said, but poorer ones should be aided. The Federal assistance thus would be directed to places where the need was greatest, he said.

The Social Security Board has reported that there are no "insuperable" obstacles to extending old-age and survivor insurance to groups now exempted, including agricultural workers, domestic servants, employes of nonprofit educational and charitable organizations, and Federal and other public employes not already provided for.

The board has indicated that a study was also being made of extending the system to "at least a considerable part" of the self-employed population.

The Nation-wide average payment now to retired workers is about $22.72; widows 65 years or older average about $20.45.

Defense Cotton Need Held Aid To Sharecroppers

Utilization of vast stores of surplus cotton for defense purposes may help solve the problem of poverty-stricken Southern sharecroppers, Nels Anderson, labor relations director of the WPA, said last night at a meeting under the auspices of the Washington committee for National Sharecropper Week.

Sale of this cotton might serve as a stimulus to production of that crop, thus raising the economic level of the workers, he indicated.

Anderson said many persons were in favor of shipping the cotton to England for use in mattresses in air-raid shelters. However, he said he had not yet formed any conclusion on the practicability of this plan.

Fr. Walsh Calls Hitler Outgrowth Of Teuton Culture

Hitler's domination of Europe is a "logical conclusion" to the 100-year-old German philosophy of state absolutism and Teutonic racial superiority, the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University, declared last night at Continental Hall in a lecture on international affairs.

The Nazis found their opportunity for world revolution, the Foreign Service School regent said, in the Treaty of Versailles, in the economic demoralization of post-war Europe, in the spiritual decadence, lack of unity and political stupidity of France and England.

Hitler simply incased Fichte, Hegel and Nietzsche, the philosophers of Naziism, in "shining armor . . . and then hurled the composite thunderbolt into the face of Europe and the world," Dr. Walsh declared.

Inflation Peril Slight, G. W. Parley Told

"There is no danger of cumulative inflation and little danger in moderate price rises during the present national emergency," Richard Gilbert, director of the defense economics section, National Defense Advisory Commission, told the opening session of George Washington University's conference on national economic policy, last night.

Gilbert said that many persons have feared an inflation similar to that which followed the World War, but "that at present there is absolutely no ground for such fears."

There is a rise in individual prices in some cases, which is extremely dangerous to the country, he said.

"We have experienced some price increases due to congestion in production capacity," he said. "Great civilian and military demands have caused this congestion. The result has been an increase in defense costs and a rise in prices in some fields."

The country needs to speed its production to a pace which will overwhelm that of the dictator countries, he said. "Germany's greatest accomplishment," he said, "was that she had imagination enough to point her production to a place where it would not equal or barely surpass her opponents, but to a place where it would completely outstrip them.

"To achieve total defense we clearly have two needs: To devote a very large fraction of our production to war materials, and to speed our production to an absolute maximum."

Stabilization Fund Earned U. S. a Profit

An announcement that the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund had made a profit of $22,000,000 came from President Roosevelt yesterday along with a comment that he thought that was not such a bad record for what he facetiously called a bunch of rank amateurs in finance.

After the stabilization fund was established in 1934, from profits obtained from devaluation of the dollar, the President told a press conference, Congressmen and columnists year after year had produced all kinds of bedtime stories about how the fund would be depleted and would lose money. Furthermore, he said, a lot of people tried to get their fingers on it for various purposes which they considered worthwhile.

But, he added, the Government has been able to keep it intact from any depredations and he said that was a pretty good illustration of the fact that the American Government was not wholly amateurish in the financial part it plays in the country.

Mother Finds Girl, 17, Overcome By Auto Fumes

Seventeen-year-old Harriet O. Nobles was in Emergency Hospital last night from effects of carbon monoxide poisoning suffered in the garage at her home, 5526 Broad Branch Road Northwest.

She was found unconscious in the garage, which is under the house, by her mother, Mrs. Harriett L. Nobles, who went to the garage when she heard the motor of Harriett's coupe running for an unusually long time. The girl was slumped in the front seat. Mrs. Nobles called the Fire Rescue Squad.

Firemen, using an inhalator and artificial respiration, revived the girl and she was taken to Emergency Hospital. Her condition last night was said to be good.

Mrs. Nobles, wife of Frederick I. Nobles, assistant supervisor of printing and publications at the Labor Department, told police her daughter was preparing to drive to Woodrow Wilson High School, where she is taking postgraduate work, and apparently started the car's engine before opening the garage doors.
